the cashier of the First National bank of Albany:

First National Bank.
Alfred C. Schmitt, Cashier.
Albany, Ore., Feb. 27, 1908.
Dear Sir: Your inquiry of the 26th inst., received, and in reply will say the argument "A Dry Town Makes a Dead Town," is false; as is amply proven by the prosperity of Albany, Corvallis, Eugene and every other town that went "dry" two years ago in this valley. Business along all legitimate lines has been increasing right along. Albany is a cleaner, a prettier and more desirable city to live in since the saloons went out of existence, and the booze element sought other quarters.

The open saloon is the enemy of every legitimate business and occupation; it only tends to tear down.

It causes money constantly to go out of a city, and in return it will give its citizens that which only disqualifies them to do honest and paying labor.

The saloon and what goes with it is a curse to any community, and the American people are waking up to the fact.

I do not believe there is a power on earth that can keep this nation from doing the right thing in the end, as far as the open saloon is concerned—it will go, and must go.

Simply from a purely business standpoint, we cannot do otherwise. The local option law can be enforced and is being enforced here and in the places I have above cited.

All that is required to accomplish it, is to have the citizens make up their minds to have it done.

Very respectfully,
ALFRED C. SCHMITT.
