AUTO RACE ON AUTO SHOW DAY

A five-mile automobile race is to be a feature of the auto show day which has been postponed from next Saturday to the Saturday following, according to plans now under consideration by the automobile committee of the La Grande Entertainment and Market Day association.

This committee, consisting of A. V. Andrews, Ray W. Logan and G. M. Richey, is now securing a list of owners of "choo-choo" cars who are willing to come to La Grande from outside points with their autos for that day. There are 40 autos in the valley, and the committee hopes to have practically all of them here for the parade.

The race is to be over country roads. According to present plans, the course will follow the old Island City road, and, passing through Island City, will come home on the new road through May Park, finishing where the start was made, on Adams avenue somewhere. This course is fully five miles, and the roads are to be touched up a little by that time, thus allowing for fast driving. This feature will no doubt be an interesting one.

In the short time given them the committee was unable to arrange the auto show for next Saturday, and have postponed it to admit of more careful preparation.

The Armory Appropriation.

"Manifestly unfair; abusive, but not logical or a statement of real facts."

That is the estimate placed by prominent National Guardsmen on the argument against the armory bill as advanced by the Oregon grange in the publication lately issued by the state dealing with legislative measures to come up for vote under the initiative and referendum at the June election.

In fact, the argument against the bill is not conspicuous for its logic. The grange, in the beginning, says it is not opposed to the National Guard, and then goes on to say that it has been chiefly useful in riots and labor troubles, and that the construction of armories would constitute a species of graft.

The writer of the argument must never have known that the National Guard fought the Spanish-American war, the Oregon Guardsmen, as volunteers in the Philippines, bringing unending glory to this state, and that the National Guard is now the only military force upon which the United States could depend in case of invasion or other emergency. There is only a handful of the regular army; it requires a year to train volunteers, so the guard—110,000 strong—constitutes the military mainstay of the country.

As to the hints at graft, and there is nothing more than slender, unfounded hints, no department of the state government has been so free from that kind as has been the Oregon National Guard under the administration of Adjutant General W. E. Finzer, who has practiced the most rigid economy possible.

It is hinted by the Grange that should the appropriation be allowed for armories, other communities which succeed in the future in becoming the stations of new companies would be asking for armories. That would be nothing out of the way. Certainly the people of say, Klamath Falls, Grants Pass, La Grande or other possible stations would not be grangers if they asked the state to provide an armory for a military company which was giving its services gratis and which stood ready to respond to the call to arms at a minute's notice.
