POLITICAL LORE.

Democrats Have Troubles in Umatilla County, Says Paper.

"Oh, pshaw!" said Mr. Shaw. Mr. Shaw was not consciously making a pun upon his inherited cognomen.

He was merely perusing a string of numerals presented to him by one Mr. Will Peterson.

Mr. Peterson is the suave gentleman who is herding democratic mavericks into the camp now busily engaged in working the hair brand "Independent," said hair brand being designed to entice the tenderfoot voter into voting into general use that distillation known as "Chamberlain's Senatorial Tonic," guaranteed under the Oregon Journal's pure food editorials.

Besides being agent for the "tonic," the guileless Mr. Peterson is chairman of that engaging committee of democrats who are persuading ambitious democrats to go out among the faithful and unfaithful and roll up sufficient independent votes to help the "Tonic," regardless of local success.

Also, the oily Mr. Peterson is engaged in greasing the ways for large chunks of the slimy simoleons to slide down into the democratic campaign fund from the pockets of the impressionable candidates charmed for the nonce as real candidates.

It was at this point—the topmost point of the greasy way—that Mr. Shaw ejaculated:

"Oh, pshaw!"

Mr. Shaw was a candidate for representative when he came over from Freewater to Pendleton to correct an error in the filing of his petition. The error was corrected and Mr. Shaw was still a candidate. He was a candidate until the merry Mr. Peterson carelessly passed over to him a list bearing the amounts to be assessed against each of the democrats running as independent candidates to aid in spreading the virtues of the "Chamberlain Tonic."

Mr. Shaw's assessment was marked at $100.

But Mr. Shaw was not there with the century. His sox were "Shawknit"—not a seam nor a rip in them. They held fast and no coin leaked out.

Then it was Mr. Shaw became not a democrat running as an independent candidate. He resigned.

Then it was that to the overbalanced Mr. Peterson came the turn to asseverate:

"Oh, pshaw!"

And he did. Therein lies the true tale of the vacancy on the independent ticket.

And there are others threatened. The price of the tonic comes too high.—Pendleton Tribune.
