Dying Man Found By N. P. Train Crew

With his head horribly bruised and bleeding, as a result of either an assault by unknown parties or a railroad accident, an unknown man was picked up yesterday morning near Scott, a station a short distance from Wallula, members of the crew of train No. 21 having discovered the unconscious form lying beside the track, says the Walla Walla Union.

With all speed he was removed to the train which took him to Wallula, where medical attendance could be secured, but the unfortunate man did not regain consciousness enough to tell who he was, where he came from or how he was injured. The sheriff's office was notified early yesterday afternoon of the accident, and Deputy Sheriff Cummings is working on the case, as there is a suggestion of foul play. About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Coroner MacMartin received word that the man had died, and he left on the 9:30 O. R. & N. train to take charge of the body, which will be brought to this city this morning. A report from Wallula yesterday afternoon said that a thorough search had been made of the dead man's clothing, but that nothing which would give a clue to his identity could be found. He is said to have a refined appearance, and does not look like he had been accustomed to manual labor.
