GOOD FELLOWSHIP.

In the "Presbyterian" of June 11, there appears an editorial entitled: "What Instead of Saloons?" The theme of the editorial is the influence of good fellowship either for good or evil. The treatment of the theme is tolerant, even in the condemnation of that species of good fellowship which is based on the vice of excessive drinking; or rather that which is developed under circumstances that lead to a harmful indulgence in intoxicating beverages. The moral is, to speak in a churchly sense, that the devil should be beaten with his own weapons; that the churches need the cultivation of wisdom in the recognition of a most potent human attribute to be offered in some manner as a substitute where the saloon has been abolished.

In other words, there is the admission that good fellowship is the one chief factor which brings patronage to the saloon. Men visit the saloon as a social habit. The sense of association is made the more potent at first by stimulating drinks. Conviviality, though it develops to vice, possesses an alluring charm. That regret and perhaps degradation follow is quite another matter. The fact of good fellowship and the figure it cuts in the support of the saloon remains; and according to the view of the "Presbyterian" writer it must be reckoned with to maintain conditions that will prevent the return of the saloon where it once has been banished.

The practical sort of effort that is recommended along this line is readily suggested, namely, the establishment of coffee clubs, or other similar places of social resort for the army of young men who are without the pale of home influence, either because they are living among strangers, or because their home is not what it ought to be. This movement is urged as one in which all churches can engage with profit as we consider the mission of the church.

This recommendation is well put; and it might apply in the saloon town as to the non-saloon town. In the case of the individual enterprise, under the auspices of a particular church the question of financial profit really has no place. The failure of such institutions hitherto has been because this very question was of chief consideration. The enterprise did not pay financially, and it was abandoned on that account. The benefits that accrue, irrespective of the financial outcome, are in line with what the churches are endeavoring to accomplish. The margin of cost where there is lack of self-support is a proper tax upon the church, if its membership is earnest in well-doing. The "Presbyterian" has broached a subject, and dropped suggestions relative thereto, which should set the churches to thinking."—Portland Telegram.

The ladies of Central church are planning to serve ice cream on July Fourth. Full details will be announced later.

LADD CANYON NEWS ITEMS

Ladd Canyon, June 17.—(Special).—Ladd Canyon won another baseball game here Sunday, their opponents being the Alice team. The score was 14 to 1. This is the first summer our boys have ever played strong teams, and they are doing some fine work, as has been shown. Out of the six games they won five.

Dr. Phy of Hot Lake, gave some of the Ladd Canyon boys a pleasant spin in his "Merry Oldsmobile" last Saturday evening. On their trip they passed through Union, where they were refresher with ice cream. Then they passed through Cove, back to Union, then to Hot Lake, where the Hot Lake dining-room steward, Mr. Alton, was waiting with his camera for a snapshot. They were: Bryan Crossen, Neil McClure, Roy Peebler, Harry Titus, Eugene Banton, Louie

Phillips, Henry Counsell, Eddie Graham and Lester Crossen.

Chance for Picnic.

If any party wishes to have a picnic and is puzzled to know where to have it at, do not overlook Lineberger's park, as not a prettier place could be found in Ladd Canyon, that is large enough for a picnic. Mr. Lineberger, who is owner of the grounds, has fixed the place and trimmed the trees up to perfection. All those who were present at our school picnic there last Friday, which included exactly 80 in number, certainly enjoyed themselves. The picnic lasted from 9 o'clock in the morning until 4 in the afternoon. The various classes on the program which were written for the eighth grade, were very good. The program which was rendered in the hall, was as follows:

Song—"The Holidays," by school.
Essay—"Education," Mary Banton.
Solo—"In Dear Old Georgia," Lulu and Mabel Counsell.
Class prophecy, Kate Braden.
Song—"School Days," Frankie Peebler.
Class history, Lulu Counsell.
Instrumental solo, Jennie Sherwood.
Class will, Alta Banton.
Recitation—"Bay in Church," Katie Counsell.
Miss Dora Murdock, who has been teaching school here, left for her home at Monmouth, Ore., last Friday evening.
La Grande Teacher Married.
C. W. Chandler and Miss Della Denning were married in Baker City yesterday afternoon. The happy young people passed through La Grande this morning on their wedding trip. They will visit Portland, Seattle and the northwest cities before their return home.
