TRY TO ROB DEPOT SAFE.

Burglars Knock Off Combination of Safe But Are Frightened Away.

Freewater, June 17.—An attempt was made last night to rob the O. R. & N. safe in Milton. An entrance was effected by working the hook loose in the back door of the freight shed. The robbers then got into the office and knocked off the combination dial and knob when they evidently became scared and left without doing further damage. Everything else was in position this morning.

Pat Tierney said that morning that he heard a noise in the station when returning home from the traction substation about 2 o'clock, but did not pay any attention as there is usually a bunch of hoboes sleeping around the platforms.

It is likely that they heard him and became scared before they had a chance to blow open the safe. There was about $30 in the safe in cash, and several hundred dollars in checks and have made a very large haul. An effort will be made to drive out the large camp of hoboes who are stopping about a half mile from here on the island near where the O. R. & N. crosses the Walla Walla river.

KILLED UNDER TRAIN.

Tried to Steal Ride to Wallula and is Ground to Pieces on Track.

James Bridges, a stranger in Walla Walla, but evidently a workingman, last night was literally ground to pieces under the outgoing 9 o'clock train to Wallula over the O. R. & N. It is thought the man attempted to beat the company out of a ride and at the time he fell under the wheels he was trying to swing underneath onto the "rods," says the Walla Walla Bulletin.

The express messenger on the train heard or felt the wheels passing over something, and signaled the train to stop. An investigation revealed parts of the body scattered along the track. The features of the man's face were not recognizable, as the head was crushed. The man was identified by a labor union card showing a membership in the Shingle Weavers' union, Local No. 13. The card was issued at Marysville, Wash.

THE HAY CROP.

Timothy and Alfalfa a Little Short—Wild Hay Very Good.

One of the best informed men of the valley says of the hay crop for this year:

"The total cut throughout the valley will be a little short, compared with last year's crop. I believe the wild hay is up to the average, but the timothy is not quite as good as usual; neither is the alfalfa. The timothy and wild hay are also late, and before cutting time we may get enough rain to help considerably.

Boy Drowned at Echo.

Jimmy McRoberts, 7-year-old son of the proprietor of the restaurant at Echo, was drowned in the Umatilla river at that place at 3:30 Thursday afternoon. He was sitting on the new steel bridge fishing, and was pulled in by a large sucker. Though his body was recovered within 15 minutes efforts to restore consciousness were in vain.—Pendleton East Oregonian.
