SYMPATHY FOR SALOON MEN.
A lot of good people are expressing deep sympathy for the saloon men who are forced hurriedly out of business by the recent prohibition vote. Sympathy can do the saloon men no good, and as they have had no sympathy for others in the past then they should expect none for themselves now.
Speaking of sympathy, let us go back to conditions here a few years ago. When the games were running wide open in most of the saloons, dozens of workmen, scores of them, spent their last cent every week in those games. The saloon men allowed the games in their places, supported them, protected them and shared in the proceeds.

Did they then have any sympathy for the wives and children of the men who were simply robbed in the games night after night? Did they think of the bare feet and ragged clothes and empty coal boxes of those families? Did they make any effort to protect those families?
A whole lot of people are placing their sympathy on the wrong card—Pondleton East Oregonian.

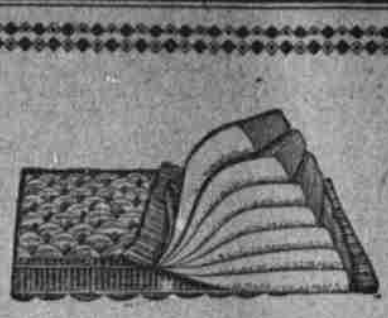

It is a peculiar breed of cattle we have in this country—those who would steal from the grave of a person not yet interred. Of what earthly use is a souvenir of this kind, and how long will they last? Such desecrators are usually too small to be noticed, but in the case where they deliberately ruined property in order to secure a remembrance of the late lamented ex-president Cleveland, severe punishment should be meted out—a punishment that would put an end to their depredations.

Speedy justice evidently animates the action of Whitman county circuit court. There is little delay in the trial of Bud Barnes, accused of the murder of Mrs. Aldrich. The retrial jury has been secured and the case is now being heard at Walla Walla, a change of venue being denied.

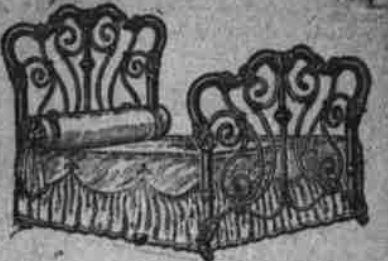

Often times it would be convenient to cast secret votes. The Portland Telegram publishes the vote at a recent issued which faced the council of that city and the public is now aware who, of the body, are in the grip of the saloons and reign of disorder.

Street Commissioner Matott has a chromo coming. The way he maintains law and order in the weed department is encouraging. When the day of the continued celebration arrives on July 1, he will have the city's thoroughfares in spick and span shape.

A WORD TO THE KNOCKER.
If you want to retain friends don't be a knocker. When you see a neighbor or fellow worker getting along nicely, don't be envious of his good fortune by knocking him. If you are inclined to kick, go up an alley and kick a fence post, or take a kick at yourself. Don't get sore because some other fellow has a little more of the "deputiveness" and sand than you have. Don't grunt, growl and grumble. In other words, for the sake of consistency, don't knock.—The Typographical Journal.

ence, the large choir which is to sing at the concert, will be heard several times. Soloists, several of them, in fact, will also be heard during the sessions.

With all these attractions La Grande will be the mecca for a large number of church members in Union and Baker counties, as well as points from without the state.

MISTAKES.
One can excuse mistakes he sees in reading newspapers, when the hurry and confusion of closing the forms is taken into consideration. But when a sign painter, who has ample time to do his work, makes such mistakes as one who painted this sign, "Cleaning and Dying," there is not much excuse. We can forgive him for spelling it "cleaning," but the word, dying, stung him. You can see where he had erased after making it "dying," but he finally let it go as "ding." "Cleaning and Ding." Can you beat it?—Typographical Journal.

ARTESIAN WELL AT NORTH POWDER

FLOW REACHES 24 GALLONS PER MINUTE.

Well Driller Kochensparger of La Grande Strikes Splendid Flow in City Limits of North Powder.—The Water is Running Over Streets Unharnessed.—Town Much Excited.—Slight Taste of Sulphur in Water.—Only Two Hundred Feet Deep.

North Powder, June 26.—North Powder is water wild. Yesterday afternoon a flowing well was struck in the city limits of this place, and the stream is now pouring out of the earth at the rate of 24 gallons per minute. Well Driller Kochensparger of La Grande, was sinking a well for Albert Hutchinson of this city, and had reached a depth of 200 feet, when the water commenced to flow out of the top. The stream is of such volume that it seems to be permanent. Not having any way of control the water, it now follows gravitation and is running unharnessed about the streets.
The town is considerably excited over the flow. People come from the country to drink at the well. Cool and sparkling, it invites taste, but there is a slight sulphur odor and taste in the liquid.
The well has been declared finished and the driller has moved elsewhere. Already there are plans on foot for curbing the stream and turning the water into useful channels.

James Madison

IN George Washington, the American Revolution had its conquering general; in John Adams its intrepid organizer; in Jefferson its bold philosopher; and in Madison its constructive statesman.

He it was who caused to be deeply imbedded in our highest law those vital and fundamental guarantees of life, property and personal liberty.

In private life he was extremely social—yet truly temperate—drinking good malt beer and wine in strict moderation. Once, when sick in bed, he caused his couch to be wheeled near the dining-room door, that he might call to his acting representative at the festive board: "Doctor, are you passing the bottle? Do your duty, doctor, or I must cashier you."

Justly named "The Father of the Constitution," he died at eighty-five. When shall his name be forgotten?
