Vote Made Unanimous.

Representatives of Minnesota and Delaware were on the platform and made arrangements to get a quick recognition. Before any announcement of the vote could be made W. S. Hammond of Minnesota, who made the speech nominating Johnson, got recognition, and moved that Bryan's nomination be made by acclamation. This was received with vociferous cheers. The applause had no time to die out before P. P. Ford of Delaware, stepped forward and seconded the motion in behalf of the Gray forces. No sooner had he retired than the chairman, H. K. Ellers of Georgia, who added his second, Chairman Clayton's voice had gone. He had the reading clerk put the motion. With one tremendous "Aye" Bryan was nominated. The chair declared the vote unanimous. There was one solitary no. It came from the New York benches, representing the opposition of J. M. O'Connor of Utica.

No one who spent the night in the hall is likely to forget the events.

When the gavel fell at 7:45 last night the hall was packed. Several women fainted and required medical attention.

Clayton first recognized Ollie James of Kentucky, inquiring if the resolutions committee was ready to report, and receiving a negative answer, he appointed a committee to wait on it. Several democrats delivered brief addresses until 1:40. Then James announced the resolutions committee would be unable to report until midnight.

Cheering Lasts Over an Hour.

Then James moved that the rules be suspended in order that the nominating speeches might be made, and this was voted, with the proviso that the vote on the presidency was not to be taken before the platform was adopted. After this was ordered, I. J. Dunn, city attorney of Omaha was recognized to place Bryan's name in nomination. He had an excellent voice, and while the speech was punctuated with volleys of applause, it was not until the peroration was reached that there was unanimous cheering.

When Dunn reached the climax and mentioned Bryan's name for the first time, there was a mighty roar. At this signal someone released a big oil painting of Bryan, dropping it over the table. Pandemonium reigned for an hour and 15 minutes. Delegates threw their hats and coats in the air and acted like madmen. A march of standards soon set in, each stealing banners from the others and marching around the hall. One enthusiast clambered to the rostrum with a beautiful girl, dressed in pink and white, clinging to his neck. She waved a flag for 15 minutes. The applause continued for a solid hour. Every time he brought the gavel down the noise was louder. Finally he directed the police to clear the aisles and then the cheering died down.

Ignatius J. Dunn of Nebraska, concluded his Bryan nomination speech with these words:

"The voters have spoken, and we assemble to give expression of their will. Their votes for the third time calls Nebraska's favorite son to be the standard bearer of his party in this gigantic contest.

"Since time began no grander tribute was ever paid to any man by a free people. He is recognized today as the most representative citizen of the nation, the peer of any living man.

"Triumph and loss have learned that he was shaped in that heroic mold in which the world's great patriots, statesmen and leaders have been cast.

"First nominated when 19 years younger than any other presidential candidate ever chosen by a prominent party; living in a state 500 miles further west than that in which any president has ever lived, he has grown in the affections of the people as the years have passed.

"Speaking and writing freely on all subjects, his heart has had no secrets and his friends have increased in numbers and in confidence.

"Without an organization to urge his claims; without a campaign fund to circulate literature in his behalf; without patronage to bribe a single voter; without a predatory corporation to coerce its employees into his support; without a subsidized newspaper to influence the public mind, he has won a signal victory at the primaries and has become the free choice of the militant democracy of the nation.

"Forming in one unbroken phalanx, extending from Massachusetts to California, and from Michigan to the everglades, the yeomanry of the party have volunteered their services to make him the party candidate; and they will not lay down their arms until they have made him the nation's chief executive.

"Nebraska's democracy which saw in him, when a young man, the signs of promise, places in nomination as the standard bearer of our party the man who in the thrilling days of '96

BRYAN PLEASED WITH PLATFORM

IF ELECTED, WILL NOT ASK FOR RE-ELECTION.

Colonel Bryan Gives Out a Statement From Lincoln When He Hears His Nomination Made—Reiterates Former Statement That He Will Not Be a Candidate for Re-election if He is Elected This Fall—Says Platform Will Help Party.

Lincoln, July 10.—William Jennings Bryan today made the following statement:

"The presidency is the highest official position in the world, and one occupying it cannot afford to have his views upon public questions biased by personal ambition; but, recognizing his responsibility to good and obligations to his countrymen, he should enter upon the discharge of his duties with a singleness of purpose, believing that one can best do this when he is not planning for a second term. I announce now, as on former occasions that if I am elected, I will not be a candidate for re-election."

Likes the Platform.

"I am very much pleased with the platform. It is clear, specific and strong. I am grateful to the convention for the work it has done in stating the issues. I am sure the platform will greatly strengthen us in the fight which we are now entering." The above statement was made by Bryan upon his reading the platform as adopted this morning.

IT OUGHT TO BE THE HAPPINESS AND GLORY of every citizen to so live and act that his fellow citizens will esteem him for his goodness, his kindness, and his usefulness. The principles of good citizenship should constitute the code of rules for every kind of business whether public or private. This applies particularly to the drug business, because, owing to the limited knowledge of the qualities of drugs by the general public, it follows that the reliability of the druggist is the chief guarantee of good service.
