Local fishermen returning from every direction of the county, report that Union teams fairly team with caravans from this and other states. The Grande Ronde has its banks well dotted with camping parties. Beaver creek has more than its usual portion of campers, while all the minor streams in the mountains are vacation places for others. In most instances the sudden attack of cold weather has not scared campers away. In fact, those who have been out in the hills say it is not nearly as chilly there as it is in the more open country.
