HUNGRY GIRLS SEARCHING FOR GOLD

PARTY MAKES HOUSE-TO-HOUSE CANVASS FOR CHUCK.

Camping Party Has Strenuous Time
Finding Breakfast in Hilgard—Hungry From Strenuous Exercise They Roam About, Almost Discouraged—Good Samaritan Found.

Early Thursday morning a merry party of five of La Grande's young ladies left the Menjirs camp on Dixie flat for an early gallop on their ponies over the hills. They rode several miles before they fully realized that they had left before breakfast. But presently it dawned on them that they felt like eating and knowing they were not far from Hilgard, decided to take breakfast, so they set out briskly for the little lumber town, and, naturally, called at the hotel for breakfast, only to meet with disappointment, "No meals served." So then not giving up in despair, they were piloted to the section house for breakfast, but still more sorrow awaited the now discouraged party, by receiving the answer to their inquiry for breakfast, "Too late; meals served on time." Give up? No. No such a thought with the party, so they wandered around until they came to the square house, where they inquired for breakfast and found Mrs. Charles Hawes, who is ever ready to lend a helping hand to needy as well as the hungry ones. Breakfast was quickly prepared for the now increasing appetites, consisting of fried potatoes, choice bacon, fresh eggs, delicious hot biscuit and butter, fragrant coffee with rich cream. Well, now, the girls did ample justice to breakfast. After feasting for some time, paying the hostess generously for the kindness, thanking her one and all again and again, the party went on its way rejoicing, not sadder but happier and wiser girls, knowing next time where to go when hungry. The party consisted of Misses Stella Oliver, Imogen Russell, Nellie Grimmer, Jean McDonald and Miss Young of Walla Walla.

Bridge Afire.

Not only is the city of Pendleton in the midst of a fire period in which valuable buildings are being destroyed, but now the bridges are burning according to the following item from the East Oregonian.

That the county bridge across the Umatilla river above the hospital was not destroyed, at least in part, yesterday, is due to the fact that a fire on the bridge was discovered before it had gotten under strong headway. The blaze was discovered towards noon yesterday as the Fordie Taylor funeral procession reached the river. When the mourners reached the bridge the mourners found a small fire blazing up from the flooring and from appearances it had been started by a match of cigar carelessly dropped upon the planking.

S. A. McGee, an old-time New Mexico prospector, called at The Observer office this morning to secure some mining location blanks, and after a while, we secured from him a statement to the effect that he had discovered a large ledge on the eastern slope of Mt. Emily that looked most promising to him. He has sent samples of the ore to assayers in Denver, and is now awaiting the returns. He is positive that the ledge is gold-bearing, with possibly a portion of copper. His location is situated about one-third up the mountain side, near the J. J. Nunn fruit farm. Mr. McGee left this morning to post his notices and will continue the prospect.

Haines Puts on Style.

Haines is putting on lots of airs lately. This week the hitching racks were treated to a coat of whitewash. We did not learn the cause of such action, nor whether it was an official act of the city government. Possibly the whitewash was applied as a disinfectant or a sort of antiseptic. In any event, it is symbolic of the purity of the city, and the country horse which is forced to stand and chew one of these racks half the night should feel highly honored.—Haines Record.
