APPENDICITIS EXPLAINED.

We have admitted that appendicitis exists; we disclaim its frequency. Where the medical doctor and the osteopath clash, however, and here the osteopath gives no quarter, is in the cause and treatment—not only of appendicitis, but of all disease. When appendicitis is present, we contend that the condition is the result of a cause; the cause is a mechanical one. We go to the medical authorities to prove our point. Both osteopath and medical man admit that in this disease there is congestion and following it, inflammation of the appendix through interference with the blood supply. (That is what congestion really is). The cure is not in the removal of the appendix, but in the removal of the constipation. The way to remove the constipation is through removal of the cause of the constipation.

The cause of constipation is interference with the nerves controlling the bowels and the intestinal blood supply. This interference is mechanical and generally found at the point where the nerves leave the spinal column. Remove this interference that caused the constipation that caused the inflammation that is the appendicitis. And there you are. Sounds reasonable, don't it?—

NEW WATER GRADE ROAD

POSSIBLE JOSEPH WILL NOT BE TERMINUS LONG.

By Continuing Wallowa Extension 20 Miles After it Reaches Joseph, a Water Grade to the Coast From La Grande Would Be Established—La Grande Then Terminus for a Large Area.

The Sunday Oregonian has this to say on a matter of vital interest to La Grande:

It is surmised that the Wallowa extension will eventually be pushed east and north to a connection with the Northwest railroad, the line now under construction from Huntington along the Snake river to Lewiston. This also is a Harriman road, which is taking advantage of the water grade along the Snake river canyon to reach Lewiston and will make a route of easy grades for freight operation for overland traffic.

The new Wallowa extension is a water-grade route and with the connection yet to be built to the Snake river line, an alternate route from Huntington to La Grande will be offered that will have all the advantages of a water grade, with the minimum of curvature and grades. This will save the haul over the mountains that is now necessary on heavy freight trains and will undoubtedly be taken advantage of for the operation of everything except passenger trains.

Water-grade routes in a mountainous country are prime essentials for railroads that handle heavy freight trains and all such avenues for traffic in the Pacific northwest are being eagerly seized up by both the Hill and Harriman lines. Although the extension from Joseph to the Snake river, a distance of only about 20 miles, has not yet been authorized by the O. R. & N., it is expected by railroad men that this piece of road will be one of the early pieces of construction undertaken by that company.
