"Ma's New Husband."
"Ma's New Husband" spells mirth in the very title. Talk of love under difficulties! This three-act musical farce furnishes more difficulties in half an hour for a pair of lovers than are ordinarily encountered in a courtship that lasts several years; and the crowning virtue of the obstacles in this case is the fact that they never call for tears except when the excessive laughter evoked brings them to cool cheeks aflame from risible exertion. All this and more has been true of the appearance of "Ma's New Husband" in other cities, and theatergoers here will have an opportunity to judge for themselves when the play will be presented on Monday, November 9 at the Steward. The musical numbers are vigorous and catchy.

The Scenic.

The head liner, Miss Helen Brandon, was the strong attraction last evening at the Scenic. The little lady is fair to look upon and her wonderful pirouetting won for her the approbation of the entire audience. Her singing, though not specially strong, is pleasing, but her general appearance on the stage will tend to increase Murray in their funny skit, "Two Lunatics," was the sort which made the people laugh anyhow. The motion pictures are good. The "Romance of the Jewess" is perhaps the best of the sentimental type yet shown in La Grande.
