"The Toymaker" Thursday.

Talk about your Santa Claus with his reindeer pack for the little ones, it isn't a marker to the toys that will line up for your inspection when the San Francisco Opera company flashes its trappings at the Steward opera house Thursday night. This is where Santa Claus gets his doll patterns, and we miss our guess if there isn't more than children's stockings hung up to try and "bag" one of the mechanical dolls. The Evelyn Francis Kellogg model has a few points we would like to mention, but modesty forbids. Do you get my meaning? The points are physical. When old Guggenheimer, the toymaker (that's Teddy Webb), fashioned that chic little toubrette Adie Sharp, he produced a real Cholly Charmer; one of the models that keep these university glee club boys sending home for an increased allowance. Mabel Hilliard is such a realistic Scotch doll that she can eat porridge, and Stella Gray is the cutest little Japanese doll. The cue is natural hair, so jump in souvenir chasers, and get a photo. The Rubber Clown doll is not inflated; its Geno Gentry. Then there is the laughing doll, the dancing doll, the talking doll, the singing doll, and in fact, dolls that do everything but eat, and some of these dolls can eat—after the show.

The comedians and dandy lassies that will cluster on the stage in this merry musical comedy have their grips filled with the latest Christmas fashions. They'll cut the material in the newest style, so you are sure of a perfect fit—of laughter.

Central Railway Notes.

General Superintendent England and Passenger Agent Davis, of the Central, returned from Portland Sunday, after several days absence.

The new engine that the Central company will have soon will be equipped with electric headlight, and will be much heavier than the largest engine now run by the company.

Mechanics have this week been figuring on the roundhouse contract and it is expected that work on the same will be pushed as rapidly as possible after the contract is let.—Union Republican.
