At a meeting of quite a number of the merchants of the city, held yesterday, among other things it was decided to close the stores all day on both Christmas and New Years. There was not a sufficient number present to decide authoritatively, and a committee will canvass the matter.

Each finger of the right hand was so badly gashed and lacerated that several stitches were required in each instance. The bone was exposed in several places. Some Dangers of Combating Symptoms.

If there is fever, many M. D.s will force it down, no matter if it is but a physiological manifestation. If the heart is pounding away trying to force the blood into a congested lung, he will slow it down rather than clear the lung, and so on through the list. Fortunately when an osteopath "treats symptoms as they arise," he must, as a rule, treat the cause, and he thus does not work contrary to nature. Symptoms are but indications of disease, and disease but further indication of lowered vitality. Forcibly lowering temperature has accomplished nothing for the good of the patient for obvious reasons. Nature is out of balance, and I am convinced that many fatal results are from meddling interference with drugs which still further disturb equilibrium causing about untimely dissolution.
