BELLINGHAM EXPLOSIONS

Bellingham, Jan. 5.—Frozen water pipes in three kitchen ranges resulted in as many terrific explosions in Bellingham residences, wrecking houses and endangering lives. Mrs. H. W. Williams was struck on the head and face by a flying piece of iron and was painfully hurt. Other residences were the property of Edward J. Campbell and George Douglass. The range in the Campbell house had been burning an hour when the explosion shook the houses for an entire block. The windows were shattered and doors blown out, plaster torn down furniture splintered and parts of the stove were blown through the door. The two other similar explosions were less disastrous.
