STRIKE FLOW NEAR IMBLER

Another artesian well—this time of purest quality of water, entirely void of oily substance—has been found on the J. A. Gaskell ranch near Imbler. The flow was struck yesterday when the well was being drilled. The flow is far greater than Mr. Gaskell can consume. There will be no need of a windmill on his farm. Another well will be commenced on the L. L. McKennon ranch next Monday, by Mr. West.

GREAT CROWD ATTENDS

feature. At that little town in Utah, they sub-divided a tract into 10 and 6-acre tracts. Then there was nothing but barren land. Now there are six canneries, and homes on every tract. He predicted that in less than five years Sandridge land will be selling at $500 per acre.

Cause of Apple Shortage. C. D. Huffman was the next speaker. He affirmed that one-fourth of the apple shortage this year was due to the lack of water. He went into the great benefits to alfalfa growing of application of water, using practical illustration and conservative figures carefully compiled to prove his statement. "I have been up the site where the dam for this irrigation scheme is to be put in," said the speaker, "and it looks so easy that I marvel because it has not been done before." Coming back again to alfalfa growing, he said: "My first alfalfa cutting this year was one ton per acre. I borrowed some water and cut two tons the next cutting." These and other facts were forcibly presented.

Assessor T. A. Rinehart, being called upon, reviewed the evolution of the county from a personal experience of 40 years, as to how the county advanced from the pioneer period to the railroad, and the other natural changes, "until now we have arrived at the irrigation age, and it is up to us to solve it the same as it is being solved in other intelligent communities."

Attorney J. T. Hinkle of Umatilla county, was in the audience, and he was called upon by the president to give a little testimony regarding irrigation, as he had spent several years on a project bearing his name—the Hinkle Ditch company—adjoining the thriving little city of Echo. He spoke as one with authority, but not knowing local conditions, could not understand how we could cover such a large acreage with such little investment.

The Plan of Organization. Following the oratory, the plan of the committee was presented, which recommends an organization with a capitalization of $600,000, divided into 30,000 shares, with a par value of $20 and each share to represent sufficient water to irrigate one acre of land.

The report also recommended that the subscription books be kept open until April 1, 1939, and after that time the board of managers can fix the price of stock.

Eleven Thousand Acres Secured. The committee reported in the neighborhood of 11,000 acres subscribed up to the hour of making the report, and is confident that the total amount reached will not fall below 15,000 acres.

Great Interest Manifest. As we go to press Judge T. H. Crawford is commenting on the report of the committee. There is a much larger attendance than when the meeting began at 2 o'clock. Of course, not all of the 11,000 acres subscribed are represented this afternoon, but undoubtedly many thousands of acres of land will be transferred from the preliminary to the official list.

To Whom It May Concern. Notice is hereby given that on December 1 I took up at my place at Starkey, one pale red cow branded "J. K." on right hip; crop off right ear; waddle under throat; one 2-year-old red steer, swallow fork in left ear; no visible brands. They are now at the Imbler stock market and will be sold according to law unless the owner pays costs and proves property. 1-15-41w E. F. JONES.

ANDERSON CASE DRAGS

The case which was held before Recorder Cox attracted no small amount of attention. Last evening Anderson through his attorneys, C. H. Finn and C. E. Cochran, demanded a jury, and this morning the following jurors were selected: J. R. Oliver, R. W. Logan, F. B. Halsten, A. V. Oliver, Dr. C. P. Charlton and Harry U. Myers.

City Attorney J. F. Baker and District Attorney F. S. Ivanhoe conducted the prosecution.

In as much as this is the first case for violating the local option law under the city ordinance, it is receiving more than ordinary attention. The chief witness, Cole, swore positively that he, in company with three other men, walked into the Palace saloon, ordered the drinks and a pint bottle of liquor, paying 80 cents for the same. The city expected to have the three loggers who, Cole said, were his guests at the bar, as witnesses, but they could not be found this morning, evidently having boarded a train during the night.

When the defense took the witness for cross-examination, another series of verbal battles ensued. By repeated attempts, the defense wanted to show that the attempt to procure the liquor was premeditated—whatever bearing that might have with the jury would be hard to ascertain. The court overruled the objections to the almost endless flank movements. In his rulings the court held that the trial was to ascertain whether or not Anderson sold liquor to the witness, Cole. Cole was collected and at no time did the defense shake his story, which related in detail, the buying of the "drinks" for Anderson and himself, the purchase of a pint bottle of whisky, taking it to the chief of police, and the latter locking the bottle up for safekeeping, after proper labels had been attached. The bottle was in evidence as exhibit A.

Almost the entire afternoon was taken up with the cross-examination of Cole, the star witness for the prosecution. Though the defense tried by every means possible to tangle the witness and cause him to double on his track, he stood firm and told his story, when permitted to do so, without once damaging his first statements. To the great amusement of the spectators the attorneys indulged in considerable word fighting, and had there been a referee to award the decision so far as their personal sparring match was concerned, he would have been compelled in justice to all parties, to have announced a draw, with all parties in splendid condition to continue the contest until morning. As we go to press there is no indication that the case will be given to the jury before some time next week, as from present indications the attorneys have discovered the secret of perpetual motion, and there does not seem to be any one making an effort to stop the wheels of justice. Chief of Police Walden was also on the stand and substantiated in every detail the story told by Cole, wherein Walden was a part. At 3:30, Robins, the star witness for the defense, was put on the stand.
