Principal place of business is to be Baker City and the object of the new concern is to manufacture films for moving pictures.

Few thought when Louis Moomaw, son of Uncle Dave Moomaw, was experimenting with a camera that he had constructed himself for taking moving pictures, that his efforts would develop until his work received the approval of the best critics in the country. It was another case of genius being uncovered, and the company that was formed today purpose pushing young Louis Moomaw's ability with all vigor possible. It will mean a fight with Edison for his concerns today control the moving picture film business. According to Louis Moomaw two French artists are on their way from Paris and will have charge of finishing the films. To build the business properly it is believed that an office will be created in Portland and arrangements have been made with others who expect to embark in film manufacture independently, so that an interchange of business will be possible.
