MAY NOT BE HEDBERG'S BUT O'NEIL'S HEAD

A special to the Pendleton Tribune from Hermiston, says:

The human head found on Umatilla Butte, near Hermiston, may be that of Hedberg, or it may be that of Jack O'Neil. Both men disappeared last summer. Both were seen last at Umatilla and neither has been heard of since his disappearance. The shape of the head shows intelligence and both men were above the average in brightness. John O'Neil was a witty Irishman who had been in the employ of the Newport Land & Construction company. Owing to his penchant for liquor, he lost his job. When last seen he was in the company of Sam Simons, a negro in Umatilla, and had been drinking. This was in the latter part of last June. He was a globe trotter and those who gave him an after thought, believed that he had joined his countrymen at work on the North Bank road, then being constructed or that he had felt the wanderlust again. But the finding of the fresh skull on Umatilla Butte suggests that he may have taken the long journey and that the brilliant wit of Jack O'Neil had failed to save him from a tragic ending and his body from the ravages of the wolves.

The relatives of Hedberg have been notified and when they arrive here a search of the rock peaks, slopes and gulches of Umatilla Butte will be carried out. Interest has been aroused by the possibility of finding other clues, the identity of John O'Neil, the kind of clothes he wore has been recalled and it is thought that if the remainder of the body and the clothing can be found, the mystery of which man it was will be cleared up. The other mystery, as to how the man met his fate will remain unsolved perhaps forever. Whether he was murdered for money or whether he wandered in a delusion to the top of the Butte and fell from a cliff will probably not be revealed, unless discoveries on the clothing may tell if a robbery was committed.

FAMED OPERA COMPANY PASSES THROUGH CITY

It is seldom that a famed and world-renowned opera company touches La Grande, but for a brief 10 minutes yesterday such an organization was in this city. The Lombardi Opera company, en route from Spokane to Boise, with a special train, reached here about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon and was taken east immediately afterward. The size of the company and the bulk of its belongings can be guessed at when it is known that it required four Pullmans, one chair car and two baggage cars to transport the company. With the train were Eugenio Esposito, the famous tenor who stars in "Lucia" and "I Pagliacci"; Angela Antola, Mme. B. Ferracini, a striking beauty of the Italian type; Alessandro Scalabrini, Jacchia and Lebegott, the orchestra conductors, and others. The company is making a successful tour of the western states.
