THROAT TROUBLE TREATMENT.

Excellent Results Secured by Osteopathic Methods.

The Impression that osteopathic treatment is adapted only to the relief of spinal curvatures, paralysis, rheumatism, and chronic nervous diseases is one that has very naturally been formed by many who have made no practical investigation of the subject; for it is cases of this kind, in which other methods have failed, that have come to the osteopath during the long period in which he has been establishing himself; and it is upon his success in treating these old troubles that his reputation has been based.

But the day when the practice of the osteopath was limited to cases of this nature has passed; and everywhere more people are beginning to appreciate the fact that the science offers the very best hope of relief and cure, whatever may be the disease.

As an illustration of this, it may be noted that public singers, speakers and actors, whose work requires perfect condition of the throat, and is a severe strain upon it, nowadays resort to osteopathy when they have used their vocal powers to excess or in any other way contracted throat troubles. Whether the affliction be slight or serious, osteopathic treatment can do more, and do it more quickly, safely, and painlessly than any other procedure.—Osteopathic Advocate.

SUGAR FACTORY

at Ogden and pointed out various reasons why the factory should remain. It was the consensus of opinion among the leaders that if the factory stays, the acreage here will be cut down. The same quantity of water used in the past to irrigate 10 acres will now be turned on five—provided the factory remains—thus increasing the productiveness and reducing the expense account.

Eccles Actually Coming.

While Mr. Eccles left Ogden today for Los Angeles, he will be in La Grande the last part of the present week. When he comes, there will come with him final decision, which, when announced, will divulge the fate of the factory.

Mr. Bramwell said: "I am surprised to find the wide scope of damage the removal of the sugar factory indicates. I stepped across the road after leaving the Sugar company office and met an old-time friend, and as soon as we had exchanged greetings he asked me if it was a fact that the factory was about to be taken away from La Grande. When I told him things certainly looked that way, he said: 'Does this mean, Mr. Bramwell, that your country has generally gone bad?' To this I replied that such was not the case, but that it was a matter of insufficient water. 'It seems funny that everywhere they are clamoring for factories and that you cannot feed a small factory. To say the least, this feature will condemn your country more than anything else that might happen to you, and for this I am sorry as I have many good friends out there and many of whom may return here.' I think that this view is very far drawn but at the same time I feel confident that the removal will cast a bad sentiment concerning this country. I am glad, however, that I have done my duty and have done all within my power to save this factory to this country, at the same time the indifference manifest by many is certainly very discouraging. Indeed, I am of the opinion that the water will be better appreciated after the well has gone dry.

"While the above is true, I think, too, that the worst feature of the whole thing is that if the factory goes or is taken away, that we will not find it very easy to float the irrigation bonds."
