know that I am in favor of education in the broadest sense of the word, and have watched with pride the growth of our high school and will always further every interest to make it stand for the highest culture of every boy and girl connected with it.

Hitherto I have listened with respect and consideration to Mr. Hockenberry's many plans and schemes for the good of the school, and find at a late hour that to be treated with consideration in presenting my views to the public I must necessarily agree with him. Now I wish to present another plan to the public, which will show that at the present time we have adequate school accommodations.

The sixth, seventh and eighth grades can be taught in some of the five vacant rooms; this will give the entire upper floor of our present high school building consisting of six rooms and an assembly room for the high school. In four of these rooms 160 pupils can be more than comfortably seated.
