club, got together this morning very [folow in seven other cities. early-that is to say, at 8 o'clock. Within a few minutes of their meeting every merchant in the city was called over the phone and told very gently but firmly that his presence was required at the club rooms at 8:30 sharp. They were there, 25 of them. Mr. Collier made a short talk. When he was through, every one of these business men had guaranteed $10.00 toward defraying the expense of iluminating the streets during the sessions of the Oregon-Idaho development congress which will convene here on the 27th, and during the week of the carnival. Walter Pierce, for the Grand Ronde Electric company, will furnish the juice free, and the only expense the merchants will be called upon to bear will be that incident to wiring and putting the globes in position. The iljumination will extend on Depot street from Jefferson avenue to the Elk's club, and on Adams from Chestnut to after the carnival. Other plans for the entertainment of the city's guests are rapidly taking shape, and will be completed in a few days.

Pokes Gun at Teller's Face-Later Stephen Hiatt a Boy, Precipitated Over Dangerous Dam, But Eventually Rescued-Help Came When Boy Was Almost Exhausted From Struggle With The Eddies Below The Dam-Had Been Fishing When His Support Gave Way.

> Stephen Hiatt, aged 13 and the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Hiatt who live near the brick yard; was last evening carried over the Oro Dell dam and for nearly a half hour was buffeted a straw in the shape of a broken 2x4 scantling. How he managed to survive the mental and physical strain, until rescue came is a mystery to Stephen had been fishing on the crest of the dam, gaining a very highly coveted position over the dam by extending a light plank out from the pier. From this perch he was suddenly precipitated to the water by the breaking of his support.

That he is alive today is credited to the fact that he fell so far over the crest of the dam that the suction could not pull in front of the obstruction where death awaited the boy. To be rushed down the 20-foot incline to the whirlpools below was instantaneous almost, and while the boy's com-Stephen was struggling for his life. Carl Nelson's son was the witness and he quickly recovered his faculties and ran to the Nelson home for assistance. This came in the shape of a Rescue was thus effected.

The Hiatt family was first informed that their son was drowned, but of course, their first shock was alleviated when actual facts were known. Another condition of things that helped
