THE LOST COAT

IN GOOD HANDS
Wednesday evening when A. W. Nelson, city editor of the Observer, was preparing to go to Walla to attend the track meet and look after the boys he has been coaching, he missed his overcoat. Knowing that he had left it in the office at noon time, the natural conclusion was that the coat had been stolen. At any rate the coat could not be found, and Mr. Nelson had to go without it. Walter Ferguson had all the police of the city looking for the coat, and it was thought that some disreputable character might be picked up before morning with the coat on his back.
Yesterday about noon the coat was mysteriously replaced on the hook from which it had been taken the day before, and an investigation disclosed that Publicity Manager Fred B. Currey, formerly of the Observer, but now connected with the Commercial club as publicity man, and with the Merchant's Association as secretary, had need of a coat on a trip which he made to Cove Wednesday afternoon.

GLIMPSES OF THE ALASKA

YUKON-PACIFIC EXPOSITION
Laird & Lee, the Chicago publishers, have gotten out a very fine souvenir booklet of the Seattle fair that is to be.
Is a handsomely bound collection of realistic photographic views, illustrating the wild natural beauty and marvelous progress of Western America, and graphically depicting the most interesting features of the International Exposition to be held at Seattle from June 1 to Oct. 15, 1909. Accompanying each view is an instructive and entertaining explanation of the scene shown. The rugged beauty of the Rocky Mountains and the scenic grandeur of the Cascades and Olympics are reproduced so vividly and described so graphically, that a glance through this collection of views is the next thing to making a trip to the great Western Wonderland and a visit to the Exposition at Seattle.
