LOCAL LOST YESTERDAY

La Grande got a hit yesterday in the fastest game of the season, played with Huntington, and in which La Grande was defeated 3 to 0. Regardless of the fact that Huntington bunched its hits in one inning and La Grande errored five times, all transpiring in the same inning, letting in two scores of the three, it was a fine exhibition and one that kept the crowd in good humor until the last inning when it was discovered the locals could not find Spooner for a hit, and thereby lost the game. Nelson, the local twirler, found the Huntington thrower for the only hit of the game, and backed up by splendid support in infield and outfield, the Huntington thrower was able to defeat the locals. His variety was large and he stirred things up with good mixing. While Nelson was better by far than the preceding Sunday he was still a shade off color yesterday, especially when he was touched up in the fifth. But his work was good nevertheless. On the La Grande team there was consistent playing. Proe again walking off with the laurels of the day, though Salee pulled down a dandy pop up and Zip made a sensational catch. The presence of the band with its liberal quota of music helped to make the affair a pleasant one and things took on a color of Class D ball all right. The first score came in the fourth when Wheeler got transportation, then simply purloined everything from then on home. In the fifth session Kowall singled, but was thrown out by Childers at second. Starcher singled and was advanced one station by Spooner's bingle to right garden. He registered at third on a hit by Machl, and when Machl stole second, Childers threw high and while the ball was being recovered, Starcher had of course come in and Machl was safe at home when Childers dropped the relayed ball from deep center. Thus the only scores of the day were made.
