STRANGERS AFTER FACTS

"The irrigation project of the Grand Ronde valley is attracting attention far and wide. As an advertising asset the canal is worth considerable. People coming through on the cars are asking about it. There is no doubt that it will bring many settlers to the county as soon as developments reach a more advanced point."

This is the statements of A. D. Crige the W. O. W. organizer who is a newspaper man of repute and devotes considerable of his time to traveling. Wherever his duties call him, he finds men who are anxious to learn of the irrigation project in Union county.

Sheep With Seven Feet.

William Barker has at his livery stable in Echo a freak sheep, which is certainly a wonder and a freak of nature. The little fellow is only four months old, but is hearty, well and sound in every particular. In fact, the sheep has seven feet, four of the feet being on the right front foot, relates the Echo Register.

Mr. Barker is making arrangements to take the freak to the Seattle fair where it will be placed on exhibition. It is certainly a curiosity and should prove a drawing card.

LOST BOY FOUND.

Walla Walla Lad Wanders Away and Is Chased by Hounds and Posse.

WALLA WALLA, June 1.—After having been missing since early yesterday morning 13-year-old Earl Dun can was discovered this afternoon about 3 o'clock 10 miles from the place where he was last seen. Blood hounds from the State Penitentiary were placed on the trail this morning, but were unable to follow the scent of the lad.

Grave fears were felt by his parents that he had been killed accidentally by two other boys with whom he went out squirrel hunting, and in spite of the fact that they disclaimed all knowledge of it a posse was organized this afternoon, and scoured the country this afternoon, with the result that Earl was found near the O. R. & N. tracks at Blue Mountain station.

NEVER USED IT.

A Different Story Than Many Expected to Hear.

In an address to Grand Army Veterans here today, Major General O. O. Howard a new light upon the personality of his war-time associate and personal friend, General U. S. Grant. He told a story of sleeping in the same room with Grant at Bridgeport, Ala., during the war. A whiskey flask was hanging on the wall of the room and General Howard said he apologized to his superior officer.

"I never use it myself," said he. "This whiskey probably was left here by some soldier."

"Neither do I use it," answered General Grant, "and what is more, I am sorry any man in the army does."

BIG DAY AT GRANGE HALL

At Grange hall today, a host of Blue Mountain grangers are assembled as guests of the unmarried members of the grange. Last winter a contest was conducted in a literary way, when the stakes were that the losers should entertain the winners. The married folks were pitted against the unmarried and the contest waxed hot as time progressed. When the affair ended, the young folks were the losers and they have proven themselves worthy losers this afternoon. Speech making, music and above all, good things to eat, were the order of the day.

The Grangers are hard workers and also enjoy social features. Consequently urgent farm matters did not deter them from attending.
