LA GRANDE WINS HANDILY

Listless and boneheaded plays by Baker City yesterday spoiled what might otherwise have been a good game in the contest between the Baker City cellarists and the La Grande club. As it was, La Grande ran bases and scored almost at will, and had the locals not given let up on their strenuous gall, would have gooseegged the visitors to a fare-thee-well. Seventeen to two is some victory, and while the spectators were enagined at the postively boy-like action of the man on the stellar mound, they could not help but cheer some of the clever fielding done by the visitors at irregular intervals. Then too, Baker City never registered a kick during the entire game, when, sometimes, objections would have been in order. This was an extremely commendable feature of the otherwise ragged game. The promised change in Baker City's line-up came alright, but a bunch of kids constitute it. However, with coaching the aggregation might learn baseball.
