CONCLUSIVE ARGUMENTS.

Eastern Papers Speak in Flowing Terms of Big Choir.

Some interesting and convincing arguments in favor of the Mormon Tabernacle choir which is coming here this month, are to be found in many corners of the earth. One of these the Observer publishes herewith:

But the main feature of the entertainment was the chorus singing. The voices displayed before the audience last evening are of the best; of course they are picked voices of such a degree of excellence are to be found in a city the size of Salt Lake is an admirable tribute to the purity of the Rocky Mountain atmosphere. Good as they evidently are by nature, they have received no little benefit from the careful culture they receive at the hands of Conductor Stephens. The control of the conductor was perfect, and the mastery obtained over the compositions rendered was a revelation. There was what is often lacking in concerts by professional people, a spirit of enthusiasm among the singers that more properly rendered the chosen selections than could have been done by professional skill alone. But when to the enthusiasm of the amateur is added the skill of the professional, the result is perfection.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.
