Grand Opera is Coming.

With the exception of a few selections given at concert entertainments, lovers of classic music in La Grande, have never had an opportunity to hear the master works of music adequately presented in their own city, so that there is little wonder at the evident interest and pleasurable anticipation over the announcement that the International Grand Opera company will give performances of the most fascinating operas of world-wide fame.

The engagement will be on Thursday night next with a presentation of Rusticana. To Italy belong the honor of having invented and most successfully developed opera, which seems to have reached its apogee in Verdi. Never has any opera captivated the fancy of music lovers so forcibly as Rusticana with its richly embroidered drama, brightened up a variegated orchestra coloring and scattered with some of the choicest flowers of melody that ever blossomed under an Italian sky. It is to be followed with one of the choicest offerings, the second act from "Lucia de Lammermoor," which is a dramatization of Sir Walter Scott's famous novel "The Bride of Lammermoor" and set to music by one of Italy's greatest opera composers, Donizetti.

It is a great remedy and one of the best patent medicines on the market. I handle some others for the same purposes that pay me a larger profit, but this remedy is sure to effect a cure, and my customer so certain to appreciate my recommending it to him, that I give it the preference."
