"The Girl With the $20,000 Voice."

When "Lo" the unique musical comedy in which the Harry Askin Company are presenting John E. Young comes to the Steward Opera House soon, Anette Hall, the girl with the $20,000 voice will make her appearance for the first time in this city, and one of her first on any stage. Nevertheless her marvelous voice, beauty and personality will beyond question make a sensation here. For Harry Askin, one of America's foremost showmen, and the owner of "Lo" believes that in Miss Hall he has discovered another Lona May.

Even as a child her voice showed marvelous promise and she was ambitious to sing in public. So confident was her mother of her ability that in the past six years every cent of their capital has been spent in Miss Hall's education and the cultivation of her voice and this summer she was ready to try and reap the reward of her expenditure of time and money.
