THIRD PARTY HAS DIED

NEW PARTY AT PENDLETON HAS SHORT LIFE.

Party Thought to be Booze Panacea
Looses Identity.

At the coming city election the people of Pendleton will not have an opportunity to vote whether or not they favor the "third party" plan for the regulation of the liquor business. says the E. O. Next year, when the liquor question is again voted upon, the people will again have to choose between prohibition and blind pigs upon the one hand and unlimited and unrestricted saloons upon the other.

This situation has been brought about through the failure to circulate and file the petitions calling for the submission of the plan of the "third party" at the coming city election. The time for filing the petition expired last night and at that time the petitions still lacked much of having the necessary number of signatures.

When the work of the special committee which drafted the close regulation or third party plan was completed last week four petitions were drafted for circulation. The petitions were handed by the chairman of the committee to Mayor Murphy on Thursday with a request that he the mayor, attend to the circulation of the papers. The task was accepted by Mr. Murphy and the special committee viewed its work as having been completed.

However much lethargy was shown in the matter of having the petitions circulated, John Halley, Jr., circulated the papers on Saturday and secured some forty signatures. No other work was then done until yesterday afternoon when a short lived effort was made to secure the other 200 signatures that are necessary. As a result the time was allowed to expire without the petition being filed with the recorder.

According to a statement made to the East Oregonian by John Halley, Jr., he found the saloon men generally opposed to the plan and they refused to sign the petitions. Many prohibitionists took the same view of the movement and refused to sign. He estimates that one out of every three men whom he solicited refused to sign the papers. However, even at this it is evident that a sufficient number of signers could have been secured had a more vigorous effort been made.

REYNOLDS YOUNG HERO

O. A. C. NEWS BUREAU APPLAUDS
YOUNGSTER.

La Grande Athlete Accredited With Being Pride of College.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Nov. 3.—(College News Bureau.)—Football hero worship at this college has centered upon little Charles Reynolds, quarterback of the college team. It may be because he is small; it may be because of his ability to play football; it may be because of his pleasing personality; but certain it is that he has become a college hero.

Reynolds, who weighs only 115 pounds, comes from La Grande where he has played on the high school team for the past three years. When he applied to Director Angell for football equipment, some three weeks ago, he was amused; when he appeared on the field the students were amused; after he had worked out for a few evenings the coaches and students commenced to wish that he weighed about 40 pounds more; now, everybody is satisfied with him just as he is.

His individual work is accurate and effective. He is that rare type of player
