BASEBALL TALK SOON

MOVEMENT ON FOOT TO GET THE PROMOTERS TOGETHER.

Meeting Will Be Held Early For the Purpose of Outlining Plans.

That a meeting of the business men interested in having a good baseball team in La Grande next year is to be called in the near future was the statement of Jack O'Brien, the local promoter of the national game, last evening. He said that he was rapidly getting the right men together in the different towns of this section of the country with the view of taking up the work of forming a league.

A four town league, O'Brien says is a sure thing. The league may be made of six towns. The feature of the league this year is to be that a $1,500 cash forfeiture is to be required of every member. A suitable ball park is also sure to be procured. A meeting to organize an association and elect officers and consider other business matters pertaining to baseball will probably called during the first few days of next month.

What Does Osteopathy Treat?

For some reason everybody upon first hearing of osteopathy imagines it is a very limited treatment, good for a few ills, but not adopted to treat all sorts of conditions, acute and chronic. Such an assumption is very erroneous. Osteopathy is a complete system of medicine and is adopted to the cure relief and cure of all curable cases. It is just as successful—if not much more so—in the acute field, such as caring for the grippe, tonsillitis, pneumonia, typhoid and other fevers, cramp colic, dyspepsia, dysentery, and menstrual disorders, than in the field of chronic cases like rheumatism, paralysis, chronic dislocations and such things in the cure of which osteopathy got much of its early fame.

Many ills, usually relegated exclusively to the surgical field are better treated by osteopathy than by the knife. While osteopathy makes a good share of the fashionable operations of the day unnecessary, it recognizes the value of surgery as a last resort in many cases—yet not nearly so many as do many physicians of other and older schools—and it employs the skill of surgery when it is necessary. We trust our readers will never forget that osteopathy covers a wider domain of disease and disability than either of the "regular" medical schools or surgery, excepting both with their own lines of demarcation, and that it offers a new treatment for multitudes of ills that fall in both the field of the physician and the surgeon as their practices are now conducted.—Osteopathy Herald.
