Back From the Copper Mines.

Howard Johnson, who has some copper mines above Copperfield on the Snake river, returned to La Grande a day, yesterday, and will go to Baker City tomorrow.

Mr. Johnson in speaking of the outlook of that district is exceedingly optimistic. He says the advent of the Snake River railroad in that country has undoubtedly opened up one of the greatest copper mining regions in the world. Just at this time, he says, things are somewhat quiet at the copper camps, although the larger and older mines are working steadily and some of them are shipping out considerable ore. In the spring, however, says Mr. Johnson, that country will experience a boom that will surprise the people of Oregon, most of whom it takes considerable to surprise in the way of rich mineral finds. Plans have been made for all kinds of developments, among which is the spanning of Snake river with a steel bridge at some convenient point near Copperfield. Also the building of the overhead tramway reaching from the railroad to the mines above the old Kleinschmidt road several miles in length and the building of a huge smelter on the railroad. These are also big things planned in the way of electric railroads reaching out from Snake River into the Pleasant and Eagle valleys. These lines are to be built and operated by the big Ox Bow electric people. Work on the Ox Bow project is progressing toward a finish and early spring if nothing retards the progress of the company will see this gigantic power plant in operation. Power and light from this plant will be used to light the city of Boise and intervening towns as well as the surrounding mines in the copper belt. He asserts that there is now copper ore of high grade enough on the dumps to supply the country for a year if it was smelted and put into mercantile shape. Many of the smaller prospects are of a necessity lying idle this winter on account of the snow. There is no snow immediately in Copperfield as it lays directly in the valley of the Snake, but where the smaller mines are located it is much higher and there is lots of snow. The towns along the Northwest railroad in the spring, he says, will grow like magic, and in his opinion that will be the great country next year.

Hold Option Election.

Seattle, Nov. 18.—An animated contest between the wets and the dries is on today in Auburn, where a local option election is being held. The anti-saloon workers are now active in the Northwest and entertain hopes of eventually making Washington and Oregon as "dry as a bone" as they have made many of the southern and southeastern states.

Russian Symphony Orchestra.

New York, Nov. 18.—The Russian Symphony Orchestra will begin its American session with a concert in Carnegie Hall this evening. Additional concerts will be held from time to time until March 3. As in the past the conductor is Modest Titchler, the distinguished Russian who has been seeking, with great success, to introduce the country's music in the United States.
