Chinese Case Heard.

In the case of the state vs. C. Wolf in which Wolf is charged with having knifed Chinese Louey, keeper of the noodle joint on Fourth street, the first witness for the defense, Wolf himself, was called to the stand at 3:30 this afternoon and testified that the Chinaman wanted to make him pay for two other fellows who had run off. He said that a fight had ensued in which he had knocked the Chinaman against the door cutting his face.

Judge Fee Here.

Judge James A. Fee of Pendleton, who has been in Enterprise attending court came out this afternoon on his return to Pendleton. Judge Fee reports that the Wallowa session of court will probably come to an end this week.

MOVE TO PENDLETON.

Walla Walla, Nov. 18.—The Washington-Oregon Traction Company which is composed of local capitalists, has announced that it will move its headquarters to Pendleton because they can not obtain certain franchises here.

One of the franchises that was granted them, has been vetoed by the mayor. The company say they will build a line between here and Pendleton.

The Elite Dying & Cleaning Works recently located in the Mahaffey building is doing a nice business. They call for and deliver goods. Their advertisement will appear in tomorrow's paper.

Back to Nature.

Were this article a polemic, innumerable quotations might be quoted to show that the medical writers in isolated instances of lucidity regard anatomical displacements as a prolific cause of disease. But the one pertinent principle—replacement, adjustment, removing the lesion by an intelligent understanding of the exquisite vital machine and a skillful manipulation to restore parts to their natural order—was not even hinted at until Dr. Still came. Painstaking clinical observations and carefully made deductions were rendered almost valueless because of complete failure to apply the clearly indicated remedy—the restoration of correct anatomical conditions. Dr. Still has taught the world adjustment instead of medication.

The cry "Back to Nature," is now being heard on every side, and there is a great popular revolution from the universal drugging of a quarter century ago. It is not necessary to put your ear to the ground to learn that a new era in therapeutics is upon us. Its in the air.

The rapid advancement of osteopathy in fifteen years from a system practiced by one man to a profession numbering up wards of five thousand practitioners, supporting seven colleges and numbering several million of lay adherents is some indication of this popular awakening, and likewise is evinced of the success of osteopathy as a healing art in meeting the demands of suffering humankind.—Osteopathy Health.
