A Biograph Subject.

"To Save her Soul," a picture that might easily be made a sermon without much change. It purports to give the experience of a beautiful girl in the country who is offered an attractive opportunity by a noted vaudeville manager. Her lover, the curate, follows her after hearing of her success and arrives in time to find her at a banquet tendered by some young swells in her honor. The dramatic scene when he draws his revolver to shoot her to save her soul is startling in its vividness and causes a chill to strike one. But it also arouses her from her false dreams and they are seen kneeling at the little altar of the church back home. Always pictures that please at the Star.

Whites Attacked by Negroes.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 8.—After killing three negroes of a mob that had besieged them in a construction camp near Halls Bar, a party of surveyors and workmen were rescued today by Captain Burke and a posse of officers from the local police department.

The news reached Chattanooga late yesterday that negroes who were armed with rifles had surrounded the whites. Surveyors had taken refuge behind the unfinished government dam they were building. Immediately a rescue party was dispatched to Halls Bar. Captain Burke in charge of the police and telephoned headquarters today that three of the negroes had been killed during the siege, which had been lifted. It is stated that the trouble is over and that he and his men would return to the city "after breakfast."

The trouble between the white men and the negroes is thought to have originated in an altercation between black laborers.
