

Hanford Coming Soon.

Charles B. Hanford comes to the Steward Opera House on March 16 and the play will be "The American Lord" which is the combined work of George H. Broadhurst and Charles T. Dazey, two men whose individual efforts as playwrights have been productive of such good results, that one is inclined to expect something out of the ordinary from them in collaboration. The play is in four acts, opens in North Dakota, then takes its characters and story to England. The idea of dumping a "wild and woolly" westerner in England after compelling him to take a little that is his by inheritance, is not without its humorous possibilities and the authors are said to have made the most of it. Mr. Hanford as John Bruester, and Miss Marie Drofah as Mrs. Westbrook have succeeded in modern comedy roles to an extent that must be gratifying to their many friends and admirers who have witnessed the inimitable performances they have given of the classics. The production is both elaborate and complete and the cast one of excellence throughout.
