

O. A. C. STUDENTS TO ARRANGE BALL

FASHION AND SOCIETY TO SEE SOMETHING SUPERB

Benefits from annual event will go to high school track

Dual objects have actuated graduates and former students from Union county to the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis, to inaugurate an annual O. A. C. ball in this city. In the first place, the graduates who already have a sound and well grounded association here, wish to establish a social connection with the social circles of the city which will not alone afford the members of the association amusement in a social way, but will give the public a benefit of the event. The ball is to be annual and no expense or effort is to be spared. There are some 30 affiliated with the association and from this many it will be possible to make the first party one that will eclipse all former dances of the season. The first date has been set for April 22 and invitations will be sent out in a few days. While the old grads. have not announced that they were going to set a pace for fashionable balls, it is nevertheless a fact, and the best in society will be out for the occasion.

Then there is another motive. The track team funds in the local high school are depleted, and all the proceeds above expense from this annual ball will go to the team to help in carrying additional athletes to the Walla Walla and O. A. C. meets. The members of the O. A. C. Association in Union county are, La Grande being the addresses of those not otherwise specified:

they were of National League calibre. That they should play a much stronger game this year is admitted by baseball students.

Pittsburg can hardly hope to do any better than she did last year and whether she wins the pennant again depends largely on the improvement or failure of improvement shown by the other clubs. Chicago has a team of veterans and many are predicting that the team is due for a slowing down, even if Johnny Kling who used to be called the brains of the Chicago "works" is back on the job. Steinfeldt, Tinker, Sheekard and Schulte showed last year that they are at least getting no better and it would not be surprising if the veteran twirlers came "untied" this season.

New York is expected to be a better pitcher than he was last year. The "Luther Bur" plants. Jennings crew to obtain commanding lead.

The Boston American League team this year, however, is without the year ago, Manager Fred Lake, who this year has been transferred to the hapless Boston "Doves." Lake was given credit last year for much of the Red Sox success and it isn't on record that Patsy Donovan, his successor, ever geared up a bunch of players in the way that Lake did. Fans generally are commiserating with Lake that a better fate than the Boston Nationals did not befall him this year.

Both the Cleveland and the New York teams of the American have shown much better form in their spring training than did Comisky's White Sox, who are virtually a new team this year, with three new players for the inner works, new outer pickets and several new battery combinations. Connie Mack almost had a pennant last year with his rejuvenated team and the Red Sox set a sizzling pace until near the end with a team that promised no more than the White Sox now promise. So it won't do to count Comisky out of it. As for St. Louis, Boston and Brooklyn in the National and St. Louis in the American, there doesn't seem to be a derrick in existence strong enough to lift them out of their ancient berths near the bottom of the heap.

An added interest in the National's race this year is the adoption of a strong policy regarding the umpiring and the protection of the umpires. Pres. Lynch bids fair to follow the example of Ban Johnson in the American in this respect and it is predicted that the days of the umpire baiting are over.
