BAT OUT VICTORY IN NINTH INNING SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Two Straight Games While on Tour of Wallawa County.

Blystone's home run clout in the ninth inning of the Saturday game between the La Grande and Enterprise high school teams at Enterprise, chased home the winning run in the second game of the series and let the La Grande squad come home yesterday afternoon with the two Enterprise scalps in their belts. The final score was 15 to 16. At the beginning of the ninth, Enterprise was one point ahead but Childers scored following a single, a steal and another advancement, tying the score. Blystone rapped out a home run and broke up the game in La Grande's favor. Childers got a home run earlier in the game and everyone of La Grande's team displayed excellent batting ability.

The team is well pleased with the reception given it on its tour.

HE STUDIED TOO HARD

After the death of Professor Koopman, one of the most remarkable scientists of Germany, the following manuscript was found among his papers:

Holding the chair of chemistry in the university, all the work of my brain has been devoted to the decomposition and reconstruction of matter. I have long been convinced that we must pass through matter to get at spirit—in other words, our medium instead of being a person must be science. Now, by chemical agents we photograph matter which we can see. More than this, we photograph objects we cannot see except by the aid of the telescope. Still more, we photograph objects beyond the range of our vision even assisted by the telescope. Ergo, may we not by the extension of the process at last get a picture of beings existing in spirit form?

This dry scientific preface is but preliminary to the story I have to tell and is essential to its understanding. Ten years ago I married Louisa Markham. Five years ago she died. Since then my scientific studies have run in but one view, to bring her within the sight of my mortal eyes.

The discovery of radium gave a new impulse to my investigations. Radium is the first substance known to exert power without exhausting itself. The steam engine must have coal, the body of the car must be fuel. Radium, I struck one that here was a substance akin to spirit, neither requiring fuel. But since radium is matter, reasoning from analogy, spirit may also be matter. We may photograph matter even though invisible. Therefore may we not photograph spirit?

I will not ask you to follow me in my studies of photographic processes. I tried to penetrate the realm of soul. I will only say that I at last discovered a substance which I converted into a plate—or, rather, laid upon a plate—a hundred times more sensitive than any known form of matter. It was one of many I had tried in making ordinary photographs and failed. But on one occasion while experimenting with it I was called away. On returning several days later I took the plate from the camera, and it occurred to me to develop it.

To assign a reason for this impulse—I had no object of which I was conscious—would be to leave the scientific field and enter that of psychology. I am convinced that I was impelled by one in the spirit world to develop the plate. Such direction given to human thought is very common. I developed my plate—not with the usual agents, but others I had proved by experiment to be far more delicate—and what was my astonishment to see the semblance of human forms. The difference between them and living persons I cannot explain. To get an idea of them they must be seen.

Why these figures had appeared before my camera I do not know. I could never get them again. If they were spirits they had happened to be where they would be photographed.

I pondered long on how I might photograph my wife, provided she was accustomed to frequent places she had been used to frequenting in life. There is a window of her bedroom at which she used to sit and look over a view she returns to her childhood home and seeks the wayside shrine in penitence and remorse. Her father discovers her there and leads her to her home and to her bedroom where she sleeps in childish repose of home, sweet home.

On the day this last paragraph was written Professor Koopman was taken ill and wearing that smile.

I have made a number of photographs of my wife holding out her arms to me, however, just as I had succeeded, would break down. They interrupted my friends interested. Thinking I had thought so necessarily that at last I would see my wife looking at me as she had often done while sitting in that chair.

The figure was not distinct enough to permit showing a woman sitting in the chair. After the fifth exposure a man shone brightly. I continued the exposure. For the successive days the day, but found nothing on it when developed. I exposed my plate all one very clear of the sun's apparent motion. The chair would continue irrespective of the sun's position. The light thrown on it in summer from 8 o'clock in the morning till about 5 in the evening. I tried a lens—no on the principle of the clockwork so that the light thrown on it in summer from 8 o'clock in the morning till about 5 in the evening.
