ELGIN FANS IN GOOD GLEE

ONE-SIDED CONTEST YESTERDAY PLAYED AT BALL GROUNDS.

Large Elgin Crowd Comes, Sees and Returns in Fine Spirits.

Inter-County League.

Overwhelming defeat was dished out to a large "houseful" of fans yesterday afternoon at the Lincoln lot which is in better shape than ever before, when the inter-county league was set in motion under auspicious circumstances, but discouraging results.

Nearly 250 jovial fans came in from Elgin on the afternoon train and through the day maintained a gleeful mien, for at all times did things move along just suitable for Elgin. Elgin came intent on maintaining amicable relations and did so splendidly. There was nothing to mar the occasion except the sloppy grade of ball dished up by the locals. The good natured rivalry between the two teams, between the two classes of rooters, the satisfaction from all sources at the indicator manipulation by "Joe" Keeney—who appeared as the extra man in the lot for the first time, were the only redeeming features as far as La Grande is concerned. Elgin was playing good ball, and in fact is much better versed this year having already played several games this season.

With La Grande it was different. Many of the players have never seen each other before. The new faces in yesterday's lineup include a south-paw by the name of Brown who is employed on the Walter Pierce ranch. O. R. & N. Operator Starcher who in times past played with Huntington as back stop, and Young Stacy who bloomed into faster company than back lot teams with a good deal of success. Stacy's base running and apparent inclination to play ball all the time, branded him as a desirable adjunct to the team. Brown did well, for with no support he and Starcher did most of the playing. No complaint can be made against them. The old timers, who know better, did not seem to warm up and never got in the game. The error column is discouragingly large. However, the fans are willing to give O'Brien another trial as all realized that in the haste of recruiting men, no practice was indulged in, no team work was possible, and general disorganization was noticeable on every hand. On the other hand however, there was a general spirit of apathy and dont care in the La Grande ranks which will have to be rooted out before financial backing is obtainable.

How It is Done.

Returning from school the other afternoon, a little girl proudly informed her mother that she had learned to "punchtate."
"Well, dear," said her mother, "and how is it done?"
"You see, mother," explained the child, "when you write 'Hark!' you put a batpin after it, and when you ask a question you put a buttonhook!"

THE LION'S ROAR.

An Appalling Sound That Brings Terror to the Traveler.

Once in the lion country you learn the real reason why he is termed the king of beasts. He looks it. Besides, there is the terror he casts over all the brute creation about him. And as for terror, there is one feature of life in East Africa that the traveler never forgets—the lion's roaring. To me no other sound in nature is more awe inspiring, more appalling, especially if heard at really close range or among hills, where the echo resounds in its rolling double bass. Contrary to the common idea, lions do not confine their thunderous calls to the night only. Frequently in open daylight one may be startled by a sudden outburst. They are a noisy lot too. At night I have heard a band keep up the dire chorus for hours at a time, a blood curdling concert that brings to mind every tale, fanciful or true, of their daring, of their fierce rapacity and might. It seems, still further, to have an added dreadfulness when one is lying within the frail walls of a tent, with only its canvas between one and the formidable musician.

Listen now! There goes one booming in the distance, a roaring obligato that breaks into from six to a dozen calls. From the first to the fourth the volume usually increases; then it dies down. At very close quarters one hears the roar melt gradually into a purr, itself diminishing to a growling, discontented murmur last about half a minute, or there is the other sound, equally menacing—a soft and suggestive crunching noise, as though the lion had already settled to a grewsome meal. The lion's voice is mighty, as mighty as his strength. Forget his habits, his love of carnion and his daylight turn of cowardice and you have the impression of a king of beasts—a real royalty along the brute creation.—Everybody's Magazine.

BUILT ON DISCIPLINE.

Big Department Stores Are Managed Like an Army.

"This is like an army," the manager explained when I went to him to ascertain by what system he handled the big department store. "The assistant managers are the generals, the department heads the colonels, the floorwalkers majors, and so on down the line. Only matters which are out of the ordinary routine are brought to the commander in chief.

"The organization is built on discipline. Each individual knows what work he has to do, and if he fails the failure reacts directly upon him. Thus each in turn is responsible to the one above him until the responsibility reaches this office. In the final analysis I am responsible to the firm. If a girl ties a bundle wrong or there is a dispute with a customer I am directly responsible, although I have probably known nothing of the incident. I pass the actual administration of authority and responsibility right down the line until the person who is at fault feels it personally. Doubtless hundreds of things happen in this store every day of which I have no knowledge, and I don't need to know about them. So long as the man to whom I have delegated the authority delegates it in turn to some one who knows how to use it properly there is no reason why I should interfere.

"This is the way it should be. I should not consider that we had an effective system if it were otherwise. A system must be so perfectly organized and every man must know and live up to his responsibilities so sincerely that I could walk out of this office today and not return for six months."—Interview With Manager of New York Store in Bookkeeper.
