Strain is Accused of Fraud.

The more or less famous tax suit brought by J. R. Dickson and other Pendleton tax payers against County Assessor C. P. Strain, the county board of equalization and the sheriff, is now being tried after many months delay. The suit was filed nearly two years ago and the sheriff was enjoined from collecting the taxes last year, relates the Pendleton E. O.

It was alleged in the complaint that the county assessor had discriminated in his assessments against certain city properties and in favor of the farmers. It was charged that he did this for political effect and that he was therefore guilty of fraud. The county board of equalization was also charged with fraud in permitting the discriminating assessments to pass, while a temporary injunction was procured which prevented Sheriff Taylor from making the collections.

The case has been set for trial on two or three different occasions but each time it has been postponed at the request of the plaintiffs, who apparently found difficulty in getting ready for trial. After several postponements, the case was finally called this morning and County Assessor Strain has been on the stand practically all day. When he is through, other witnesses will be called.

Wool Prices Low.

Though no regular wool sale was held here yesterday two local clips were disposed of during the day. Fearson & Johnson sold their wool for the price of 12 1-4c, the buyer being Defour, while the Charles Johnson clip was sold for 15 1-8c per pound, according to the Pendleton E. O.

The activity yesterday came about as a result of an understanding between the buyers and a number of woolgrowers to the effect that if the growers would place their clips on sale the buyers would bid but would guarantee the growers the privilege of withdrawing their clips without injury. In the past growers who have withdrawn their clips after having received bids have sometimes met with difficulty in securing favorable prices. This caused many of them to hesitate about offering their clips yesterday until assured by the buyers that the withdrawal of the clips would not work against them.
