ANOTHER BILLION DOLLAR CON-GRESS.

With the adjournment of congress and a footing up of the expenditures that were ordered made it was found that in round numbers the amount figures to $1,074,000. When the first songress adjourned that spent a bilfon dollars it created considerable talk over the land for the expenditure of so much money seemed extravagant.

Now, things are different.. The country is more densely, populated and demands are greater on the traasury, but probably the chief reason why there is little comment is because the United States has acquired the spending habit. From the capitalist to the newsboy every individual in the country is a good spender. He believes in keeping the coin in circulation. So when congress makes heavy appropriations a few may offer criticism but the great majority think it is all right and pay little attention to the matter.

This session has accomplished a great dcal! but it has been through the efforts of President Taft more than through either branch of congress. Quite true everything has to

"The mountain labored-and it brought, forth a laughable mouse." One thinks of the old maxim as he reads the report of the congressional committee appointed last winter to ascertain the reasons for the increase in the cost of living. The temptation to apply the saying to the report is strong, says the Spokesman-Review The committee tells nothing, separately, that was not known already The report's chief value lies in the assembling of the many individual causes of the increase of the cost of living. There is also a minor usefulness in some of its negative statements.

The republican majority of the committe claims that the Dingley and Aldrich tariffs were not a "material factor in causing the advance in prices." since 1900, but acknowledges that "many industrial combinations by manufacturing or controlling a majority of the output, are able to exercise some control over prices." The poor see no difference between such combinations and trusts, and consider both the main cause of high prices.

Other noteworthy causes named by the majority of the committee include increases in the farmers facilities for banking, which enable the farmers to steady and raise prices, increased cost of distribution, as when Madame Housewife has the grocer and butcher deliver at her door; increased quantities of gold; rising standards of comfort and storage of food. The report woud have been more helpful if it had suggested remedies. The one implied in "wilful waste makes woeful want," might be employed advantageously. The people and legislatures of the entire world need a course of study in the the'ft, inculcated by "Poor Richard's Almanac.'

Marse Henry Watterson deplores the agitation now going on for woman go through the hands of congress, suffrage. And Marse Henry is not but Taft had a way of making it go alone in this matter, for there is nothrough that was admirable and he thing in it but trouble for the ladies, created no flurry in doing it, either, and most of them have plenty of

Look for the makers' label and see if it bears the mark "XTRAGOOD".

That name means best clothes just as sure as two and two make four.

XTRAGOOD clothes have never failed to give twice the wear, twice the satisfaction, twice the value of any other kind.

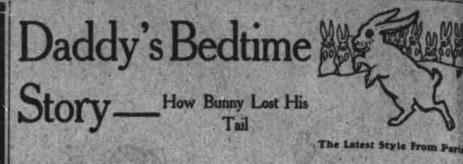

Why? Because there's double the care taken to make them perfect. Cloth, style, fit, tailoring all are combined to a degree that makes XTRAGOOD clothes supreme.

N. K. West,

OW, lambkins," said daddy as Jack and Evelyn got comfortably set-tied on his lap for their bedtime story, "I am going to tell you tonight about the mischlevous little rabbit and how he lost his tail."

"Did poor Bunny cry, daddle, when he lost it?" asked Evelyn. "'Deed he did, dear. But, most of all, it hurt his pride, for he was very very proud of it. And now for our tale about the tall that was lost.

Well, once upon a time years and years ago there was a little rabbit with such a pretty pink nose and such bright black eyes that all the other rabbit were awfully jealous of his good looks. But especially was he handsome be-cause of his long, bushy tail, the longest and bushlest in all Rabbitville.

"Buony used to take good care of himself, too, and, unlike some littl folks I know, never ate too much candy or too many jam tarts or too many bananas, so that he was never sick and made to take bitter medicine. He always felt so jolly and well that he couldn't help playing tricks on the other That was what cost him his tall.

"One day while chasing a fat mouse through the woods he came to an old farmer taking a nap under a tree, and, as usual, he had rather play tricks than eat. So he let the little fat mouse go, softly crept up through the tal grass and with his long, bushy tail began to tickle the old man's nose. In moment or two the farmer opened one eye and began to sneeze and scold the flies that he thought were bothering him.

"This amused Bunny, and every time the farmer closed his eyes and began to snore the bushy tail would tickle his nose again, and he would sit up and wave his hands and slap his face and 'shoo' the files. But the game was carried too far. At last the man saw the laughing Bunny and, waiting his chance. caught him by the tail, which he cut off with his jackknife.

"Poor, frightened little Bunny was then let go, and he hurried home, heartbroken. When the other rabbits saw him they laughed and jeered and called him 'Bobtall.' and for a whole week he would not leave his hole in the ground." "Did he die of a broken heart, daddy?" asked Jack sympathetically

"Not he, dear. Bunny was a wise little chap, and when he did come out and was called 'Bobtail' again he only held his head high and said that it was the latest style from Paris. Then all the other rabbits, not to be behind the style and in order that they might keep up the credit of the Bunny tribe, cut off their tails, too, and from that time on no rabbit that did not have its tail. short had any standing in the rabbit family. So you see that people are not the only ones who have fashions."

The kiddles scrooched around daddy's knees, and Evelyn said that the bun nies were lucky, because they didn't have to change their styles.

Married Saturday Evening. Wm. Salier, a local fireman, and Miss Pearle Bearden, were married at 7:15 last Saturday evening at the Baptist church parsonage, Rev. Frank Gray officiating. The couple left for Seattle on a wedding tour and will be at home in La Grande on their return.

Lecture Tonight. George C. Miller will lecture tonight at the L. D. S. church on "Character Building." At the conclusion, readings of children's skulls will take place to illustrate the lecture. The lecture is free.
