

JUNE WEATHER UNEVENTFUL

NO FROST AND VERY SLIGHT
AMOUNT OF RAINFALL
RECORDED.

Weather Report for June Indicates
Very Little Change in Climate.

June, 1910, was a dry month and free from unusual features. The co-operative Observer's meteorological record maintained by W. A. Worstell for the month of June shows that only .46 inches of rainfall was recorded for the entire month. The mean temperature was 61 degrees, the maximum occurring on the 25, with a mark of 93 degrees, and the minimum of 35 degrees on the 8. The number of days clear were twenty-one, four partly cloudy and five cloudy. There were no frosts during the month, no sleet, no thunder storms, no auroras, but light hail on the 7th. The direction of the wind was westerly.

Your complexion as well as your temper is rendered miserable by a disordered liver. By taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets you can improve both.

TIBURON ISLAND.

Its Waters Are Literally Swarming
With Ferocious Sharks.

Less than three thousand miles from the city of New York and about a third of that distance from San Francisco there is situated, in the upper reaches of the gulf of California, a small island, worthless even for so mean a purpose as the raising of goats, but nevertheless a center of attraction for the ethnologists and archaeologists of the old and new worlds for many generations.

This rocky peak, rising from the quiet waters of the gulf, is known as Tiburon Island. Tiburon is a Spanish word which, translated into English, means "shark." The waters around the island are literally swarming with these tigers of the sea, and the inhabitants of the island are said to be no less ferocious than the sharks. Tiburon is peopled with a handful of Indians, the only aborigines of their kind in the world, known as Seris. They are reputed to be cannibals, to be so fierce that none of the mainland tribes of Mexican redskins ever dare invade their shores and to possess the secret of manufacture of a peculiarly deadly poison with which they prepare their arrows before battle.—Wide World Magazine.

The Dragon Fly.

The oldest extant poem about a dragon fly is said to have been composed 1,440 years ago by the Emperor Yuraku of Japan. One day, while this emperor was hunting, say the ancient records, a gadfly came and bit his arm. Therewith a dragon fly pounced upon the gadfly and devoured it. Then the emperor commanded his ministers to make an ode in praise of the dragon fly. But as they hesitated how to begin he himself composed a poem in praise of the insect, ending with the words:

Even a creeping insect
Waits upon the great Lord.
Thy form it will bear,
O Yamato, land of the dragon fly!

And in honor of the dragon fly the place of the incident was called Akit-suno, or the moor of the dragon fly.—"A Japanese Miscellany."

A Stubborn Husband.

A most interesting phenomenon is the stubborn husband. He is not a bad man. He is contrary, and he has to be managed. He is usually married to a clever little woman, who is constantly devising schemes to accomplish the things which make their joint lives a success.

He has no suspicion of this. If he had he would be so mad he could undoubtedly eat her. So all through life she goes on swinging a turnip ahead of his nose to make him go the same as though he were a balky mule. She is a cheery little body, and she grows plump with every year, and she does her smiling behind the door or she chuckles in her sleeve when he is not by. The stubborn husband is as interesting as a bug.—London Standard.

The Artist and the Critic.

Sidney Cooper, the English artist, happening one day to visit the Royal Academy, where some of his works were on exhibition, while a couple of critics were examining the pictures strolled up to where they were standing. At that moment the younger of the two critics exclaimed, "Any machine could turn out sheep like that!" Mr. Cooper put his hand in his pocket, produced his card and, handing it to the newspaper man, said, with gravity, "If you will kindly send that machine to this address when completed I'll send a check for $1,000 to the institute for decayed journalists."

LOST, A WATCH—On June 6th, my daughter lost her watch, supposedly at or near the depot, and the same was advertised to be left at the La Grande Investment Co. A lady called up regarding it, but party answering did not understand the matter and so informed her. If party who has the watch will return same I will prove property and pay reward. P. K. WRIGHT.

Might Help Some.

He—The women of Turkey wear their faces covered.

"We don't see Montmorency in society any more."

"No; they say he has given up society."

"I wonder why."

"He finds it so irritating."

"Irritating?"

"Yes; he now has so many ex-wives and is so apt to meet one or two, no matter where he goes."

Can't Help It.

"Are you on intimate terms with your neighbors?"

"Very."

"They must have very charming personalities."

"Hardly that."

"Why the intimacy, then?"

"On account of their borrowing propensities."

THE WORD "GOWN."

It First Came Into Use in the Fourteenth Century.

Female costume in the tenth century was classical in its simplicity. The women wore long, loose, flowing skirts reaching to the feet and a draped "cote," or upper garment. Chaucer, who died in 1400, when Henry IV. was king, frequently uses the word cote. In the "Canterbury Tales" he depicts the sergeant-at-law as wearing a "medley cote," which no doubt means a coat of many colors, while the miller he describes as wearing "a whyte cote."

It was in the fourteenth century that the word "gown" first came into use. An anonymous author in no mild words finds fault with the fashion of his days. He writes that "the commons were besotted in excess of apparel, in wide surcoats reaching to their loins, some in a garment reaching to their heels, close before and strutting out on the side, so that on the back they make men seem women, and these they call by a ridiculous name—gown."

As early as the twelfth century women's cotes were made with trains, and in the first quarter of the thirteenth century a bishop moralizes early on their vanity for wearing trained cotes, some of which contained seven ells and a half.—Westminster Gazette.

Some Variety.

"Does it always blow this way?" asked the disgusted visitor who was spending his first week in the breezy southwest.

"Oh, no," replied the cheerful native. "Sometimes it blows harder."

Remedy at Hand.

"What is the greatest evil of our civilization?"

"We eat too much."

"The trusts will break us of that."
