MAY BAR FIGHT PICTURES

NOT ONLY STATE BUT ENTIRE COUNTRY MAY ACT.

Meeting Will Decide if all or Any States will Oppose.

Chicago, July 8.—It is expected that an animated meeting will occur tomorrow when the governors of various states meet in New York to discuss the advisability of preventing the Jeffries-Johnson fight picture. The American Vitagraph Company, which spent a quarter of a million getting the pictures, says it won't oppose the law and will not show in cities where the pictures are prohibited. The question the governors are expected to settle is whether the company will be allowed to show pictures within the United States at all.

"In the Hands of the Czar."

One of the most interesting plots seen in a play in a long time was given in the Ethel Tucker Stock Co's presentation of "In the Hands of the Czar," at the Airdome last night.

This is a style of play very seldom seen in stock, showing the uncertainty of life in the land of the "Little White Father," where deaths and exile to Siberia are as common as automobile accidents.

No More Painted Candy.

Washington July 8.—When the present stock in the hands of confectioners is exhausted, there will be no more candies varnished with shellac and other gums. In the past, cheap bonbons have been covered with mixtures scarcely more edible than house paints, but the ruling in effect today will serve to stop such practices.

Several reasons are given by the food bureaus prohibiting the use of gums. One is that the gums are prepared in alcoholic solutions and even wood alcohol solutions. The other reasons are that the coating conceals inferiorities and enables candy to be kept in stock for long periods of time, both undesirable results.

Mythical Creatures of Japan.

The Japanese believe in more mythical creatures than any other people on the globe, civilized or savage. Among them are mythical animals without any remarkable peculiarities of conformation, but gifted with supernatural attributes, such as a tiger which is said to live to be a thousand years old and to turn as white as a polar bear. They also believe in a multitude of animals distinguished mainly by their size or by the multiplication of their members. Among these are serpents 800 feet long and large enough to swallow an elephant, foxes with eight legs, monkeys with four ears, fishes with ten heads attached to one body, the flesh of which is a cure for boils. They also believe in the existence of a crane which, after it has reached the age of 900 years, has no need of any sustenance except water.

JONES LAD HAD GONE TO WALLOWA THIS WEEK.

Distracted Parents Believed to Learn Son was Safe at Wallowa.

Information that has ended a siege of worry and grief in the family circle of a man named Jones, who has been living with his family at a camp near Island City, came to local authorities and the family in question last evening, when it became known that their 16-year-old son, who mysteriously disappeared last Monday noon, had worked his way to Wallowa and was employed in a sawmill there. Mr. Jones, the father, left this morning for Wallowa, to fetch the youngster home.

The little fellow disappeared very suddenly last Monday, but how he got to Wallowa and secured employment in so short a time, without money and without acquaintances—for his family are newcomers here—is a bit of information that will not be known until the boy tells it himself. During his absence the family has been grief-stricken.

SINGS ITS DEATH SONG.

A Peculiar Bird Found in the Jungles of South America.

There is a queer bird in the jungles of northern South America which is called the "pauji" by the natives, but is known to science as the galeated curassow. It is chiefly remarkable because it sings its own death song.

It does not really sing, but makes a deep humming noise which sounds very much like the Spanish words "El muerto esta aqui" (the corpse lies here). "It is while uttering this lugubrious chant," said a South American traveler, "that the pauji usually meets its death, for the hunter can then easily track it to its retreat, and it falls a victim, as the Indians say, to its own death song."

If the pauji gets suspicious it immediately ceases humming, and that is a sure indication to the hunter that the bird has seen him or scents danger. In such a case the only thing for the sportsman to do is to remain perfectly still. The bird may become reassured after waiting awhile and again begin to call, "The corpse lies here." It can then be cautiously approached and killed.

If it is only wounded the pauji usually escapes, though it cannot fly much better than the ordinary domestic fowl. It is very fleet of foot and will outrun the hunter until it is lost in the dense undergrowth of the jungle.

In the mating season the male pauji is the most pugnacious of birds and will fight its own kind whenever it meets them. Often the fight ends in the annihilation of both combatants.
