DRIVING OUT CAPITAL

Taxing of notes, which is in reality taking of mortgages, in Oregon is dangerous. Other states have tried, as did this state once, and the result was anything but satisfactory.

We remember quite well in Kansas when populism was rampant. When Mary Ellen Lease and Jerry Simpson, and General Weaver were stamping the state and crying for the taxation of mortgages.

The tax laws were revised in accordance with these populist ideas and what was the result? In no time at all Kansas was blacklisted by every loan company in the United States.

We do not know what happened in this state when Oregon was monkeying with the buzz saw, but from what is told us we should judge a lesson was taught that should be remembered.

If the law stands to tax notes, we cannot blame the tax commission for demanding its enforcement, for a law is a weak and sickly nuisance if it cannot be enforced.

We say repeal the law and do it as quickly as possible. Then after its repeal, if some wild-eyed crazy nut comes around with an initiative petition for its re-establishment—well, what should be done with him? That is the trouble in Oregon.

There is only one way that we can see. Have a house cleaning and fix the initiative measure so that it will hold water and not be used by a lot of selfish people who have no right to make laws for the natives of India, much less for the good of the people of Oregon.
