Working at its Trade. Summer's here in all its grandeur, All its beauty, all its heat, Spreading sunshine like molasses Over all the dusty street. Melting collars that were lately Very white and fresh and pure, Raising sweat upon the wealthy And the faces of the poor. 'Tis it loomed upon the landscape Like a lakeshop overdone We were sure it was the only Cherished and anointed one. In our bones we felt that never Could a season be too hot. And that summer would be certain Every day to touch the spot. Now we have it as our steady, Stopping with us all the while, And at times we pause to wonder If we really like its style, If for it with more affection Hearts would not in rapture throbb If the thing were not so very Conscientious on the job. But since summer is in season We must make the best of it, Though at times we almost wonder If it isn't a mist. It would surely be a beauty, Like a shirt waist ready made, If it wasn't so persistent In the working at its trade.
