CHANGES RADICAL.

La Grande Football Fans will Have to Apply Themselves Diligently.

New football rules are so radically different from the old sort that La Grande fans will have to learn the game over again to understandingly appreciate the progress of the game.

The players, of course, have a serious problem in front of them in becoming accustomed to the new requirements. As no rule books are available at this time, it is doubtful if the game will be thoroughly understood until later in the year. One of the problems that will foster disputes is the forward pass, which has been so arranged that the exact meaning of the clause is hard to understand. One self-evident fact is that the forward pass must not be over twenty yards toward the opponent's goal, and also that no one must interfere with the receiver of a forward pass while in the twenty-yard zone. The position of quarterback will virtually disappear and the center will not be the only one to snap the ball. Snapping also may be done by either guards or tackles besides center, and can be received and carried by anyone back of the line when the ball is put in motion.

The Observer's sporting department will school its readers in the new rules as soon as it is possible to get the authority on all phases of the new book.
