

"I can tell the swing of a custom-made coat, across the street."

That is how one lady expressed it. And there's a whole volume of truth in that simple phrase. When we fashion your clothes, they are cut and made to your individual proportions without warping or straining the fabric. Consequently they fit you all over. And they fit easily.

Struck by a moving passenger train while trying to escape across the steel bridge at Oro Dell, Tony Guido, a Greek laborer, is in the hospital today with one leg broken at three different places and severe scalp wounds aside from several other minor injuries.

The Greek heard No. 1, the local passenger coming around the bend and started to reach a place of safety on the west end of the bridge. ### Weighty Propositions.

The ark was thirty days out. "You and your wife must be privileged animals," growled Mr. Hyena, glaring at Mr. Elephant. "All the rest of the bunch are on short rations, but I notice you're still drawing regulation sized meals. There must be a reason." "There is," replied the elephant; "we threatened to rock the boat if our meals lost any weight!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Cradle Song.

Balling in a cradle song
To Lullaby Land, Lullaby Land,
The sandman steers us safe along
With steady hand, with steady hand.

Baby is the first to spy
The Lullaby shore, the Lullaby shore.
The sandman winks a knowing eye
And pities his car, and pities his car.

Now we've reached the Lullaby Land,
Where dream trees grow, where dream trees grow,
And shadow people, hand in hand,
Come and go, come and go—
Sh-sh-sh!
—Philadelphia North American.

Shopping Passion.

The new bride was telephoning to the iceman.
"How much do you want?" he asked.
"Oh," and she stopped to think. "A piece about ten inches long and four wide, just enough to keep this dear little steak till Archie comes home to lunch."—Buffalo Express.

A Mistake.

The little car that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play.
—Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

That is to say, I thought, you know,
That I had lost them then.
The girl was only firing, though,
And they came back again.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Compromise.

"Sir," began Lord Brokeleigh pompously, "I've called to request your daughter's hand in marriage."
"That's out of the question, my man," replied old Roxley. "However, I don't want to seem altogether uncharitable, so here's $5 for you."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Anticipating the Event.

"What was you askin' for the widger's bonnet, mum?"
"Well—er—I thought nlnepence."
"E's very ill, mum. I think I'll risk it."—London Tatler.

DIFFERENCES IN FOGS.

See Mist and London Gloom Have Nothing in Common.

The fog of London and the fog of the sea alike discompose traffic, and omnibuses and steamships alike have had to lay to for safety. But while the London fog gets into your inmost room and baffles even the electric light—though the candle comes out triumphant—
The sea does not disturb the saloon or the stateroom. Why is that?
The word "fog" has not been traced farther back than the sixteenth century, but the thing was known in the early years of the fourteenth. The commons, with the prelates and nobles visiting London for the parliaments and on other occasions, united to petition Edward I. to compel the burning only of dry wood and charcoal, as the growing use of sea coal corrupted the air with its stink and smoke, to the great prejudice and detriment of health. In 1308 the king prohibited the use of coal. Heavy ransom and fines were inflicted for disobedience. In the case of recalcitrant brewers, dyers and other artificers the furnaces and kilns were destroyed. But the restriction was evidently removed, for in 1308 $250—probably equal to about $4,000 now—was paid from the exchequer for wood and coal for the coronation of Edward II.—London Graphic.

CONNIE MACK'S HEIGHT HELPS HIM.

Connie Mack's great height may be the means of the Athletics winning the pennant this year. Connie admits this himself.

All American league managers agree that the dugouts in the new ball parks worked a hardship on them. They were accustomed to sitting on a bench about three feet above the ground, from which point of vantage they could watch the signs of the opposition.

With the new ball parks came dugouts, which dropped the manager and player about three feet lower than the ground level. Their heads no longer towered high and dry above the plays pulled off on the diamond. The generals just had to about learn the game over again.

The Athletics' leader was not handicapped as much as the other team bosses, as he is some tall, and he managed to get wise to the doings long before the others. Connie's players say his keen vision helped him materially.

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Baked the meadow sweet with hay.
You'd hardly expect a girl, you know,
In summer time to be shoveling snow.
