patronize them all." Nothing but evil can proceed from either. No sound defense can be made of either. It is the duty of the state to prohibit all businesses which are generally evil.

The plea for high license is put forward only to defeat prohibition. Most of those who now advocate high license are really opposed to it. If a bill to compel the payment of a license of $1,000 a year were before the people to be voted on most of those now advocating high license would oppose such a measure. They advocate regulation and high license now to defeat prohibition, and if they succeed in defeating prohibition, they will face about and oppose regulation and high license. The saloon element and its followers would be found opposing either substantial regulation of high license, if either were an issue. Neither is an issue now. There is and can be no sound defense of the saloon business.

All know that saloons are a public nuisance, and they and all bootlegging establishments should be abated.

The main trouble with enforcing prohibition lies in the fact that most of the officials charged with the enforcement of the laws are enemies of prohibition. One might just as reasonably expect to do a good business hauling freight up a mountain with a balky team as to enforce properly the prohibition law with officers in sympathy with bootlegging. The proper remedy is to elect men who favor the enforcement of all laws. All good citizens favor the enforcement of all laws.
