O. Henry Was a Shade Smarter Than the Magazine Man.

A friend of the late O. Henry writes of him: "He was reckless in spending money and frequently gave elevator boys and doboys five and ten dollar notes. But he wasn't 'easy' despite his financial regardlessness."

"His friends recently narrated an incident showing the man's shrewdness. A magazine noted for 'slow pay,' they said, contracted with him for a three part story for which he was to receive $1,500. He got $500 advance before starting to work and when he turned in the second installment (none of it had been printed yet) got $500 more and asked for the third $500 as an advance before finishing the tale.

"The editor in an effort to save money apparently declared that, after all, the story didn't appear to be worth more than $1,000—this when he had the two installments in his office.

"All right," said O. Henry; "I won't write the third one then." And he didn't. He laughed at the editor.

"Well, then," said the latter, "I'll run the two parts and then let our readers have a guessing contest as to how the story ends—and put up, perhaps, a $500 prize to the winner."

"For a moment the author thought he was outwitted. Then he said: 'Go ahead, and I'll win the prize.' He intended to win it too!"—Boston Herald.

A WEIGHTY REASON.

It Told Why One of the Nineteen Commissions Was Executed.

Before a certain gentleman set out for Japan and India his relatives gave him errands. One wanted an Indian shawl, another a silver Buddha, a third a chryselephantine carving, and so on, till the list of commissions was appalling. He agreed, however, to fill them so far as possible.

But when he returned he had executed but one of the nineteen commissions that had been given him. He had brought back only the chryselephantine carving. This he gave to one smiling cousin amid the disappointed looks of the other relatives. Why, the disappointed ones asked, had he executed that one particular commission and disregarded the rest?

The traveler smiled. "It happened," he began quietly, "that each of you had written your commission on a sheet of paper. On the second day of the voyage out I took all these sheets of paper from my notebook, opened them and spread them on my lap as I reclined in my steamer chair.

"The air was very still at the time, but suddenly a brisk wind sprang up, and every sheet was blown away except that of Cousin Max. Max's sheet was weighted down with the gold coin he had given me to pay for his carving."—St. James' Gazette.

Some persons like one sort of shoe and some another, but the kind which was desired by Pierre, the French Canadian mill hand, has never enjoyed a wide popularity.

"Shoes for Sunday" Pierre stated to the young man who advanced to meet him as he entered the salesroom of the big shoe factory.

He then sat heavily down on one of the red plush seats and allowed the salesman to insert his feet in a pair of bright yellow shoes. When they were fairly on, Pierre stood, moved his feet this way and that, took a few steps and, shaking his head, sat down again.

"What's the matter?" asked the clerk. "Do they hurt you? Are they too tight?"

Pierre shook his head violently. "She no tight," he said, "but also she no talk. Shoes for Sunday must talk, talk, all the way up in church for to sound' stylish, see?"—Youth's Companion

Tonight the Isis will present this interesting Yosemite Valley scene.

A story laid in the Great Yosemite valley during the eighties. Col. Westley has an only daughter who is the one softening influence in his rugged nature. She is fond of taking morning rides over the trails, and is usually accompanied by Robt. Adams, a sergeant at the post and who is detailed by the father to look after her safety.

Foley Kidney Pills Without an Equal.

E. Weakley, Kokomo, Ind., says in his estimation, Foley Kidney Pills are without an equal. He says: "I have had kidney and bladder trouble for over three years with severe headaches and irregularities of the bladder, accompanied by much pain. I secured a bottle of Foley's Kidney Pills and must say they certainly did the work. In just a few days my back-ache left me, kidneys became stronger and I am now over my trouble and glad to recommend Foley Kidney Pills to every one suffering in this way. They gave me quick and permanent relief and are in my estimation without an equal."

TAXATION AND SUFFRAGE.

Those who advocate woman suffrage are fond of quoting the colonial dictum that taxation without representation is tyranny, and declare that this, one of "the fundamental principles upon which the country was founded," is shamefully violated under present circumstances as far as women are concerned. Women, they say, are taxed. But women have no votes. Having no votes, they are not represented in the tax-laying body. Hence, they conclude, here is taxation without representation.

The colonists declared that taxation without representation was tyrannical—which is one thing. The suffragists pretend they say that taxation without votes was tyrannical—which is quite another thing. There is nothing unjust in requiring all citizens who can afford to contribute to the support of the government, whether they vote or not. They get in exchange for their taxes the government's protection to life, liberty and property and all the other benefits of a well-ordered society. The colonists never said or thought that taxation and votes went together and nothing of the kind has ever been attempted. Thousands upon thousands of men, as well as women, in this country are taxed without being able to vote. That is the condition of the residents of the District of Columbia. The property of minors is taxed, yet they have no votes. A man may own taxable property in a dozen different states and yet can vote in only one. Finally the tariff is a tax upon every man, woman and child, citizen and alien alike, in the country.

The truth is, that the phrase, "taxation without representation" did not refer to individuals at all, but to the dealings of one commonwealth with another. It did not mean that neither this man nor that woman should be taxed unless he or she were personally represented in the government.

A man who has not only not voted for those who are elected, and so have power to tax him, but has endeavored to keep them out, cannot be said to be "represented" by them. Yet would any one contend that all adherents of defeated candidates should be absolved from paying taxes because they were not "represented"?

But when men and women are jointly members of the same community; when taxes are laid not upon the women for the benefit of the men, or vice versa; when, finally, they are imposed by representatives drawn from the community and not by outsiders, the dictum is absolutely and utterly irrelevant.
