PEOPLES FORUM.

"Let Gov. Stubbs Speak for Kansas." "Where he speaks let us speak where he is silent let us be silent" on the question of Kansas prohibition.

Governor W. R. Stubbs of Kansas paid his own expenses to St. Louis to inform the voters that prohibition does prohibit in the state of Kansas. "Gentlemen," the governor said, "the lives of bankers are dependent upon their integrity, but I tell you such statements are made here to the effect that prohibitory laws are not enforced in my state are common lies."

The governor read from a number of letters from district judges in Kansas setting forth a decrease since the prohibition laws became effective, and the enforcement of the statute to the letter. "The brewers tell you that more liquor is sold in dry territory than ever before. Don't you know that is a barefaced lie? Is there a sane man in this whole assemblage who believes such a statement? Why, if that statement were true, all the brewers in the country would strongly be in favor of prohibition." He continued by saying that while liquor was sold under license in his state, it was necessary to maintain in Kansas City, Kans., what is termed as a "garnishment" court, but since the prohibitory law became effective, this court has been absolutely done away with. "In justice to our state and in justice to the American people, I have resounded to give the facts about the operation of the prohibition law in our commonwealth. I commenced with the chief justice of our state, Chief Justice Johnson, and asked him what his observation had been about keeping the law. I did the same thing with the attorney general of the state, and with nearly every one of the district judges, also with the mayors of 25 of the largest cities of the state, also of the police judges and the chiefs of police. I was convinced that the prohibitory law in Kansas is well enforced as any other criminal law on our statutes." He took up the proposition of finance and showed by strong proof that prohibition was an aid to business. "Prohibition is the best business asset Kansas ever had."

The people of St. Louis squirmed a little when Governor Stubbs made the statement that the eleven Kansas counties adjoining Missouri furnished the Sunflower state fifty-three (53) per cent of her criminals. This statement of the governor came with great force to his hearers because it was made by no sentimentalist but by a hard-headed business man and a practical statesman. Governor Stubbs was elected two years ago on a platform which had as its main plank the enforcement of the prohibitory law. We feel as though the statements made by Governor Stubbs should be known by the voters of Union county. The speakers who spoke in the interest of the liquor people misrepresented the conditions of the state of Kansas. No man is so qualified to tell the people of this commonwealth of the value or failure of the prohibitory law of his state than Governor Stubbs. It is well to keep in mind the statement of this broad-minded governor and statesman when our ballot is cast Nov. 8th.

LA GRANDE EVENING OBSERVER.

Better Late Than Not at All.

The pastor of the little country church had been much annoyed by having the members of his congregation straggle in long after the service had begun. One Sunday morning, when he felt that further forbearance with this fault was impossible, he decided to rebuke some conspicuous offender. About twenty minutes later than the proper hour there entered a mild mannered little woman, one of the regular attendants of the church, but quite incorrigible in her tardiness. The minister looked up, fixed her with his spectacles and remarked:

"Sister, you are very much behind time. I hope you will not be so late in getting into heaven."

The little woman looked up, smiled sweetly and without a trace of confusion replied placidly:

"I shan't care about that, doctor, so long as I get there."

And now the pastor feels that the smile that went round the church somehow spoiled the effectiveness of his reprimand.—New York Tribune.
