THE HOME RULE BILL.

The advocates of prohibition are zealous in their attempt to defeat the Home Rule bill. Why? Does not the Home Rule bill extend to them opportunity for continuing local option, the only difference from the present system being in the size of the unit—whether it shall be county or city.

There is positively no reason why a city should not control all of its institutions including the people who dispense liquor. One thing is certain if the cities are given that right there will be a strict regulation for then responsibility will rest where it belongs—upon a city administration and it will be up to the local community to clean itself up and keep itself cleanly.

Opponents to this measure say this will not be done. How do they know? Are they not presuming a good deal when they assume that a city council will not look after this much better and bring better results than a county unit.

Here is the essence of the whole matter: Liquor will be sold, either legally or illegally. That is admitted by all. Now, the next step is to regulate matters so that some one is responsible for the sale of liquor. Adopt a measure that will bring a bar-keeper to time when he sells liquor to a boy, to a confirmed drunkard or to anyone whose name has been listed with him. Make this so strong that the first violation will cause a cancellation of license, and then you have the liquor traffic regulated so that some one is responsible for misdeeds. As conditions are now there is positively no responsibility.
