UMATILLA PROJECT IS HUNG UP UNTIL HEADS TAKE ACTION

Engineer Newell in the City But Can Promise Nothing.

Project Engineer H. D. Newell, who is at the head of the Umatilla project at Hermiston, is in the city today looking up some records. When asked by a reporter for the Observer what the chances were for a continuation of work at Hermiston he said so far as he knew it was up in the air and that the heads at Washington would have to issue their orders before anything more could be done.

Lately there has been considerable agitation regarding the abandonment of the Umatilla project by the government but it is believed this has been made stronger than the facts will warrant. The department has already spent a great deal of money in the work and few believe that it will be entirely abandoned, or that it will be sold out to any individual.

Routine business consumed practically the entire time of the council last evening. Resolutions of various kinds were read and passed. The alley between Adams and Washington will be constructed by day labor as only one bid for construction of it by contract was received in answer to the bids.

The price of street sidewalk construction seems to have dropped five cents per foot for bids were in last evening which makes the total cost of sidewalks instead of 90 cents. These bids were for work on Main street and other sections of the city.

No street-cleaning machinery was purchased as various reasons require a delay in this matter.
